MEDFORD CARS OUTSELL OTHERS

Sgobel & Day, fruit brokers of New York, report as follows under date of September 4:

Sales here yesterday and today, Saturday, have been as follows: Friday—Cars, 33; Bartletts, 3900; P. & P., 3700; peaches, 3100; grapes, 11,700.

Saturday—Cars, 31; Bartletts, 3300; P. & P., 6100; peaches, 1800; grapes 15,000.

This makes 186 cars for the week, against 231 cars for last week, not very much of a reduction. Bartletts—Owing to the receipts from the northwest we had about as many as came last week, and the market was very strong all the week until yesterday, when it developed a little weakness, and today was certainly lower. Two cars from Medford today averaged $2.78 and $2.57 per box, both handsome fruit. Two from Grand Junction $2.45 and $2.33. Unfortunately we had to have an offering today, Monday being a holiday, and none of our buyers like Saturday sales. Hardly any of them have refrigerator rooms in their stores. Californians less daily, and we think another week will about wind up this fruit. Increasing arrivals of domestic Bartletts given as a reason for this little lower range of prices on those from the coast, however, at $2.50 the consumption, we think, will take all that will come if the fruit is all right. Shortly d'Anjous will be wanted.

Italians—Yesterday three cars and today two cars, making averages of $1.42, $1.38, $1.30, $1.32 and $1.08. This last car had many leakers. Our Mosier car today sold virtually from $1.60 to $1.30 according to the size. Arrivals are very light and demand strong. Heavier receipts next week, and prices may go off a bit, but will still hold very good, and we advise continued shipments. Two cars of fine, large Hungarians from California, 4x4, sold $1.75 to $1.50.

Peaches—Some big McDevitt and Sells Clings sold $1.25 to $1.15. Other Clings $1 to 90c. Arrivals quite light from the coast, only 14,000 this week against 61,000 last week, but increasing from New York state. Reported some cars Elbertas from Colorado will be here next week, and we shall report results to you.

Rae & Hatfield sum up the market on the same date as follows: Weather fine but cold. Good attendance at sale.

Malagas again comprised the biggest part of the offering, many showing some mold. Our average 92c. Tokays from Vacaville ranged from $1.25 to $1.75. Valley's ear of Florin Tokays averaged $1.80. Car of Prince grapes from Lodi showed decay, averaged 70c.

Green Bartletts sold from $3 to $3.50; ripe, $2.50 to $2.87½; B. Clair green averaged $2.26; Anderson's half boxes, $1.50 to $1.62½.

Good demand for Clings, still mostly $1.12½ to $1.25. Few Lovells, few; few Elbertas, $1.17.

Gros prunes sold today $1.25 to $1.75, showing some rot. Car of Northwestern Italians $1.50 to $1.55. Oregon Bartletts averaged $3.25 and $3.15. Half boxes $1.50.

PRECOOLING MEANS ADDITIONAL RETURNS

One of the greatest discoveries connected with the marketing of fresh fruit is the process of precooling.

Fruit to be marketable should be gathered in as ripe a condition as possible, considering the distance it is to be shipped and the time it is to be kept. Now, under ordinary conditions, very much of our choicest fruit would have to be gathered so green that its most attractive qualities would be lacking; but where this fruit is submitted to the precooling process it will keep in a much riper condition long enough to be got to market and disposed of. Our fruits are gathered in the hottest season—this is the ripening season—and it requires heat to ripen and bring out the best qualities of the fruit. When picked during the hottest part of the hottest days, fruit is heated throughout, and when packed in that condition it remains so for 30 to 48 hours after picking. It will be understood that heat is the prime factor in the process of ripening, and that the process of ripening is the process of decay. When fruit becomes thoroughly ripe decomposition soon begins, and the latent heat in the fruit as it comes from the orchard hastens this process. Now, what is known as the precooling process checks this decay by reducing the heat. The fruit, when it comes from the orchard, is immediately submitted to a refrigerating process by which the temperature is reduced to as near 50 degrees as possible, and when it has reached the lowest temperature obtainable by the methods applied it is at once transferred to the refrigerator cars and the temperature kept down as low as possible until it reaches market. By this means, unless there is great delay on the road, fruit will keep in fresh condition for a long time and reach the market in as good shape as it leaves the orchard. When fruit is picked and packed without precooling and then placed in the refrigerator cars, it requires 48 hours to reduce the temperature to that of the car, or to cool it through. When this work is done before packing the life of the fruit is increased by that much—48 hours—so that the process is equivalent to bringing our markets two days nearer, and this is a good deal in the case of tender fruits.
