PRACTICAL ROUTE FOR HILL.

Bend is an admitted goal of the Hill railroad down the Deschutes valley.

Crescent City, Cal., is an available and practical harbor for an ocean terminal.

Place a ruler on the map and Medford will be found on an approximately straight line connecting Bend and Crescent City.

A railroad built on this line would skirt the base of the Cascades east of Crater Lake and west of Upper Klamath, cross the range at the Fish Lake pass, come down the Pacific & Eastern to Medford, thence southeast, via the Josephine caves, to the coast.

Such a railroad would secure tonnage every mile of the way from Bend to the coast. It would tap vast forests between the Deschutes and Butte Falls, the great fruit district of the Rogue river, the Medford coal district, the Blue Ledge, Takilma and other rich copper regions, hundreds of producing gold mines, numerous agricultural valleys and the great redwood timber belt.

Contrast such a route with any other route to California from Bend. The Pitt river route, the only practical pass, traverses arid sagebrush plains for hundreds of miles with never a tittle of the possible tonnage.

Between the two, which is the probable route that Hill will utilize to reach San Francisco?

From Crescent City the route would go south to Eureka, thence along the coast to the Bay City. This coast line would be of expensive construction, but no more so than the North Bank line. It would afford tourists the most attractive of all possible routes, with the ocean constantly in view.

Hill has given no inkling of his intentions, but such a route is practical and a money maker, and some day will be constructed, if not by Hill by some other railroad genius.

To Chicago and Return.

October 4 October 4. October 4.

It wouldn't be surprising to see an epidemic of street improvement break out on the East Side at any time. There are a few fellows over there that can see that it will double and triple the value of their property.

There will be a dance at The Wigwam tonight. Don't forget to be there. 162

Novel Decree Handed Down by a Wise Judge.

Judge Harris of Cook county, Illinois, handed down one of the most novel decrees in the history of divorce litigation: "Win the love of your children in seven days and you can have them," is what he told Mrs. Rex Martin, who wished to be separated from her husband and have the custody of the two children. Attend the Savoy tonight and see how this decree worked out. The story is clearly portrayed, consistently acted by a clever company in a picture entitled "Seven Days." Western dramas are always welcome, especially if they are full of fire and action. "The Evil That Men Do" fills the bill, being one of the best western pictures shown in some time. "Oh, Uncle!" is the latest and best comedy picture on the market, a laugh producer of great merit. Don't fail to see this one. Entire change of program tomorrow night. One dime.

See Prof. Anton Romanoff, formerly court violinist of Austrian emperor, for lessons on violin, guitar and mandolin. Leave orders at Nash hotel.
