The reporter lay on his eider-down couch, slowly breathing his life away. It was evident that the end was very near.

Suddenly the luxuriously furnished room was filled with a phosphorescent light, and a pale shade appeared, standing at the bedside, grim and inscrutable.

"I am a messenger of Death," he said. "One moment, please!" gasped the reporter, reaching feebly for his notebook and pencil, "How's the election going out your way?"—Exchange.

Never was a more grievous wrong done the farmers of our country than that so unjustly inflicted during the past three years upon the wool growers. Although among our most useful citizens, their interests have been practically destroyed. —McKinley's letter of acceptance.
