The private cars of H. E. Huntington, J. C. Stubbs and several other officials of the S. P. railroad company were attached to Sunday evening's overland, enroute from San Francisco to Portland.

Don't forget the Ashland House for a good square meal.

If you have a girl and want her to think more of you, bring her to the B Class Entertainment, and if you have not, get one. Reserved seats are now on sale at O. Winter's store.

A number of the candidates for membership in the local M. E. church received the administration of baptismal rites by emersion last Sunday afternoon. The scene of the ceremony was the mill race above the woolen mill, Rev. S. E. Meminger officiating. A large number of people were in attendance.

"Give me liberty or give me death," said Patrick Henry. But then he did not live in the day of the B Class Entertainments or he would have said, "Give me a ticket to the B Class Entertainment or give me death."

Geo. C. Stanley has recently put in a small newspaper plant in Ashland and will continue the publication of Town Talk, which was founded some months ago in Dunsuir, Cal. The first issue from the new plant will appear about Saturday, next. Geo. is a rustler and will undoubtedly turn out a good sheet. The ADVERTISER wishes its new contemporary a successful career.

Trains may leave you but the B Entertainment will not. It stays for your benefit. Come out and patronize your schools. Seats may be secured at the Opera House Grocery.

G. P. Bradford has disposed of his half interest in the lease of the Ashland Steam Laundry to G. O. Van Natta, the transfer taking place yesterday, January 19, 1897. The firm name of the laundry is now G. O. Van Natta & Son; Melvin retains his interest in the lease. The laundry is as well prepared as ever to meet the demands of the public in their line. Patronize home industry.

The response to the call for a mass meeting of the citizens of Ashland last Thursday evening, to consider the proposition to amend the city statutes regarding the election of city officers, was not general. The people display a spirit of indifference against which the City council does not propose to contend. Were the people so disposed, they could save the City some money along the line of the proposed amendment.
