

THE WEST SIDE.

E. C. PENTLAND, Publisher.

FRIDAY, JULY 4, 1900.

Three cheers for the Red, White and Blue.

No indebtedness should be allowed on assessments except mortgages of record within the state.

Our state revenue should be raised by licensing counties in proportion to their population. This would do away with such glaring frauds in under-valuation of property, both real and personal.

The proposed Federal election law causes bitter denunciation in the South. An honest man need never fear the law. The storm of protest would seem to indicate that an honest ballot, which is all the bill aims at, is not desired there.

Our city is to be congratulated on having citizens whose public spirit prompts them to vote for a school house, which will be a credit to and a pride of the town. A town cannot prosper without good school facilities and an eight room building is none too large for our now four hundred school children.

Oregon leads in the quality of her wheat, the shipments of salmon, and now Portland is to have the largest saw mill in the United States. It will cut 300,000 feet in ten hours. The engines are to be of 3000 horse power and will cost $50,000. Work will begin at once. It is familiarly known as Wiedler's mill.

Is it right to hold property for sale at high figures and tax it at low figures? A law should be enacted that taxation values should be placed on land by the owners and not the assessor, and if any person within three months would give double the price, (conditions not having changed), that the state should compel the owner to make a deed, by paying the owner such price. Taxation is too unequal.

To properly celebrate a Fourth of July there must be patriotism. In order to be patriotic the people must realize that ours is the best government and we are the greatest nation on the face of the earth. That what we are we have made ourselves through liberal ideas and wise laws. That when one hundred and fourteen years ago the Declaration of Independence was signed at Philadelphia there sprang into existence a grand republic. That we are the people, and we are the government. It is a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Knowing these things we should rejoice in our liberty.

Eight thousand nine hundred and seventy-seven majority! This is the majority by which partial retariffs show that Oregon has endorsed the McKinley tariff and re-elected Mr. Binger Hermann. Pennsylvania is pretty strongly protectionist, but if Pennsylvania were to be carried for the McKinley tariff by a vote as heavy as this, the majority would be not 79,458, as in 1888, but 131,000. This majority is one fourth the total republican vote in Oregon, which this year will be about 35,000. It is 1,500 greater than the majority in June, 1888, a Presidential year. It is 2,400 larger than the majority for Harrison in November, 1888. It is four times the largest majority ever polled for the republican party since the war, save in 1888. The Oregon farmer has spoken. The farmer everywhere else will take up the wondrous tale. Oregon takes the first of the majority for approving the McKinley tariff. And we take this opportunity to renew to Mr. Binger Hermann, the able and hard-working representative from Oregon, to whose efforts and personal popularity so much of this result is due, the assurances of our distinguished consideration and the hearty congratulations of his party all over the Union.—Philadelphia Press.

The last West Shore contains a double page engraving representing an American coming to settle on a desirable piece of land, which John Bull already owns, and as he sits on the fence a placard says "Keep off, no room for Americans." In one corner is given extracts from the report accompanying Representative Oates bill now before congress. It is as follows:

"Your committee ascertained, with reasonable certainty, that certain noblemen in Europe, principally Englishmen, have acquired in the aggregate about 23,000,000 acres of land within the United States. This alien ownership will, in course of time, lead to a system of landholding incompatible with the best interests and free institutions of the United States. The foundation of such a system is being laid broadly in the Western states and territories. The warlike and enterprising of European capitalists have caused to be invested many millions in American railroad and land bonds, covering perhaps 100,000,000 acres, the greatest part of which, under favorable sales, will, most likely, before many years, become the property of these foreign bond holders, in addition to their present princely possessions. This aggressive foreign policy is not confined to the lands it has purchased, but is oversteering its boundaries and has caused hundreds of miles of public domain to be fenced off for grazing of vast herds of cattle, and set at defiance the rights of the honest, but humble settler. The bill would prevent any more alien than that of a Mr. Scully, who resides in England and is a subject of the queen, but owns nearly 500,000 acres of land, mostly situated in the West. Scully's estate, about 200 acres, within the city limits of Portland and Astoria, from the annual rental of the property, from the subjects of the British queen, amounts annually not less than $100,000. Another instance of landholding in America is a corresponding ownership of the lands and every land owner in this country should owe allegiance to the United States.—From report accompanying Representative Oates bill now before congress.

THE COUNTRY PRESS.

Men talk not like books; nor do books read like talkers, and yet all the wisdom of the world is contained in neither, and we can discard neither one. The country newspaper is different from that of the city, and it must of necessity be so. Each fills a different want. Each exerts a different influence. The editors of the great metropolitan newspapers, says E. A. Starr, in the New England Magazine, read on the heights of impersonal journalism, tinged their thunderbolts with a freedom born of almost entire personal irresponsibility; and while the thunderbolts are in great part scattered on the rocks below, the country editor walks with the multitude in the valley, gives the weight of his personality to the impersonal words of his paper, which come to the people like the warm handclasp of a friend, measures his words in accordance with the peculiarities of his constituents, and influences the thought and feeling of hundreds where the thunderbolt of the up approachable Jove strikes one.

It was a successful country editor in a thriving Massachusetts town who once sagely remarked that, if he were a candidate for office, and must take his choice between the combined support of the metropolitan dailies and that of the country press, he would choose the latter, and accept with equanimity the hostility of his city brethren. Every country editor knows that he is right. The great dailies, so-called, are restricted in the abstract as vendors of the world's news. Their resources in this direction are great and cannot in the nature of things be rivaled by those at the command of country papers of limited circulation.

But the country paper comes closer to the hearts of the people at large, it is more thoroughly read, and it has an influence the greater because it is one of the subtle, unadmitted, every-day forces of life. It is held rigidly to account for the honesty and fairness of its utterances. Neither can it violate moral decency to any marked extent and prosper, as can its neighbors in the great cities. In most communities its constituency is largely found in the churches, and will not tolerate vulgarity.

The country newspaper stands to dwellers outside the large cities in the place of a friend and regular home visitor, and it is essential to all things that it maintain the good character and good breeding that are required of other friends, if it would keep warm its welcome in the home circle.

AN ENTERPRISING PEOPLE.

Just now all of the Pacific slope is feeling the quickening impulse of a large immigration and the building of hundreds of miles of railroad. In many cases these roads are directly or indirectly built by the people here. The great cry in every town is—give us men of capital; and yet men of capital without enterprise are a curse to a town. Take the city of Salem as an example. She had years ago men of wealth; but with out enterprise. As a city she was a reproach to herself, and feared at by all the state. It was clearly a stagnation caused by close fist capital. Now have those men changed the condition of Salem to its present prosperity. They had plenty of money then. Their money was no enjoyment to them then, nor is it now. Other men have come to the "city of churches." Push, vim and energy were their chief characteristics. They had money it true, but they added enterprise to their capital. While they have outstripped the close fist moneybags in gaining wealth, they enjoy it as they go. Life has some pleasures to them. They are representative men. They foster education, encourage manufactures, and set the example of enjoyment of life by living themselves as befits their station. No man has the right to live to himself alone. The man with wealth should live befitting his station. The man of property has no right to refuse to sell it at some price, and when he does sell he should do so at such a price that the purchaser may enjoy a profit from his investment.

It is not always the location that determines the prosperity of a town. The people, and particularly the land owners, have more to do with it. St. Helens might have been the Portland of Oregon if her townsite owner (there was no town there then) away back in 1803 or '05 had been willing to have sold at a nominal price about 1500 feet of water front. Portland gave the site and Portland is a city. The same enterprising spirit in Port land raised $10,000 and built a road out to Tualum, planting and the same spirit established a school in Portland, which even in those early days was attended by hundreds of students.

In Whatcom in Wash. was living a farmer. His land was for farming purposes, worth about five dollars an acre. He was approached by a gentleman from the East who said: "If you and your neighbor will give me a hundred-acre deed for one half your property, I will agree not to look for another half after having located one hundred people here, built a large saw mill, built twenty-five dwelling houses, a school 1200 feet long in deep water, also built a floating mill. The land was given. People flocked there by the hundreds. Lots were selling for from $50 to $100 each. The colony made the town. Yet a law suit was commenced. The land for a deed was a technicality declared void. What was the consequence? Within six months the population had decreased one-half and property could not be sold even to pay taxes. Enterprise was defeated. Most likely it was a triumph. You cannot build a town without people. You cannot build first and sell it too. Success of this kind has killed many a town. Two things are needed to make a town. First, enterprising people. Second, a suitable location. More depends upon the people than the location. Kansas City is an instance of this fact and so is Portland.

Up at the county seat they have some enterprising men and an incident will show what it will accomplish. The story was living in Monmouth two years ago and the Board of Improvement wanted a floating mill there. It was agreed that a bonus of about $500 in money and land would be given. Correspondence was initiated, then by the writer, with Felix New. He agreed to visit Monmouth. On the day of the picnic at Independence he found that he was expected on the narrow gauge and no one was there to meet him. He was persuaded to go to Dallas, and in a few hours it was known all over that Dallas was to have a floating mill. A bonus of $1000 was raised. It was enterprise that secured that mill for Ind. Mr. New had been previously secured the floating mill would have improved their offer if necessary.

In Independence we have some enterprising business men. Such men are the life of the town. With out them it would die. Now and then, unfortunately, a headstrong man, with ill-directed energy, tries every improvement of streets, or public property, which will cost him one cent directly, even when indirectly he will be largely ruined. He is opposed to advance the papers, houses of any kind, and says that he does not care whether the town grows or not; he is better in a small town than a large one. Such men are the ruin of many towns. There is no one consulting them on public questions for they have no public spirit. They do not want to die or pay taxes, and they do not want to be alone. Let them alone then.

Mr. J. O'Donnell, of Clatsop, has put down in hardy words of Cooper, and will succeed them in business. The trouble of stock has been taken and Mr. O'Donnell takes immediate possession.
