

THE WEST SIDE

E. C. PENTLAND, Publisher.

FRIDAY, JULY 25, 1890.

The agitation in congress of the silver question has a great deal to do with the scarcity of money even here in Oregon.

We cannot measure people by our own half bushel. Our own opinions are as apt to be biased as theirs; and no two persons look at things alike.

Did you ever attend church and know of a man going away home in great anger because the minister preached "at him"?

The Federal election bill which is to allow the supervision of elections of congressmen, to be held by a central power, can, it seems to us, but be the beginning of an intense sectional strife and may open the way for great injustice.

The WEST SIDE in its advocacy of better assessment laws, and also favoring the giving of the very best school facilities for our rising generation, does so from no personal selfish motives.

That the property of the wealthy should not contribute to the education of the poor is contrary to the principles of our republic.

"He who opposes free schools denies all right in collective humanity to see that the next generation is preserved from ignorance and vice; and his followers, carrying out his theories, move in flinchingly but himself, hold it to be an express evil of common school education that it equalizes the opportunities of rich and poor, inasmuch as it thereby gives the children of the unsuccessful a longer lease of life; whereas the assumption is that such children, being presumably inferior, ought to be encouraged to die out as soon as possible.

While we deplore the fact that these ideas do have lodgement in the breast of some; yet those self same men may be sincere in what they believe and in many other respect larger hearted and more progressive citizens.

OUR GREATNESS. It is said that no people on the face of the earth love to hear their country praised so much as citizens of the U. S.

otherwise than that I should love both lands, and long to do whatever in my lay to bring them people to share that love for each other?"

"Truly the republic is the Minerva of nations, full of wisdom and sprung from the brow of Jupiter Britain.

Starting as is this statement, it is true in comparison with that which is to follow. In 1850 the total wealth of the United States was but $2,400,000,000.

Into the distant future of this great nation we need not seek to peer; but if we cast a glance forward, as we have to do, we can see that for only fifty years, and assume in that short interval to serious changes will occur.
