Over me swung an immense mass of crushed me to pieces; the floor under me was principally composed of crazy laths, and if they gave way I was pre-cipitated to the distance of about fifty feet upon a loft, which would in all probability have sunk under the impulse of my fall and sent me to be dashed to atoms upon the marble floor of the chancel a hundred feet below. This was my first terror, but the ring-more awful and immediate dread came on me. The deafening sound of the bell smote into my ears with a thunder which made me fear their drums would crack; there was not a fiber of my body it did not thrill through. It entered my very soul; thought and reflection were almost utterly banished: I only retained the sensation of agonizing terror.

Now, thanks to God have not had an attack since November, 1898. descended I endeavored to shrink into the very floor to avoid being buried under the down sweeping mass, and then, reflecting on the danger of pressing too weightily on my frail support, would cower up again as far as I dared.

At first my fears were mere matter of fact. I was afraid the pulleys above would give way and let the bell plunge on me. At another time the possibility of the clapper being shot out in some sweep and dashing through my body, as I had seen a ramrod glide through a Sold by Druggists at 61 per Bottle. 6 for $5. door, flitted across my mind. The dread also, as I have already mentioned, of the crazy floor tormented me, but these soon gave way to fears not more unfounded. but more visionary and of course more Arabia" during the reign of Claudius

The roaring of the bell confused my and weighed upward of 400 pounds. intellect, and my fancy soon began to teem with all sorts of strange and terrifying ideas. The bell pealing above and opening its jaws with a hideous clamor seemed to me at one time a raving monster raging to devour me; at another a whirlpool ready to suck me into its bellowing abyss. As I gazed on it, it assumed all shapes. It was a flying eagle, or rather a roc of the Arabian story tellers, clapping its wings and screaming

In the vast cavern of the bell hideous faces appeared and glared down on me with terrifying frowns or with grinning mockery still more appalling. I found I was becoming delirious, and trembled lest reason should utterly desert me. I feared lest, when utterly deprived of my senses, I should rise—to do which I was every moment tempted by that that five minutes would clapse without ringing, but at the end of that short time the bell would be rung a second calculate time. A minute and an hour were of equal duration. I feared to rise lest the five minutes should have elapsed lest the five minutes should have elapsed and the ringing be again commenced, in which case I should be crushed before I could escape against the walls or framework of the bell. I therefore still continued to lie down, cautionsly shifting myself, however, with a careful gliding, so that my eye no longer looked into the hollow. This was of itself a considerable relief.

The considerable of the poles had in a

The cessation of the noise had in a great measure the effect of stupefying me, for my attention, being no longer occupied by the chimeras I had conjured up, began to flag. All that now distressed me was the constant expectation of the second ringing, for which, however, I settled myself with a kind of stupid resolution. I closed my eyes and clinched my teeth as firmly as if they were acrowed in a vice.

YARD.

We did not know of this, but the remedy was easy. "Jack," said my companion, "step up to the loft and cut off the hat," for the way we had of muffling was by tying a piece of an old hat or of cloth (the former was preferred) on one side of the elapper, which deadened every second toll.

I complied, and mounting into the belfry crept as usual into the belfry crept as usual into the belfry crept as usual into the belfwhere I began to cut away. The person who called him was a brother of the club who, knowing that a brother of the club who, knowing that the time had come for ringing for service would catch me.

This dread stimulated me, and I slipped out with the utmest rapidity and the time had come for ringing for service, and not thinking that any one was above, began to pull. At this moment of my imprisonment, penetrated with
