Mrs. J. H. HORSNYDER, 182 Pacific

"When a girl at school, in Reading, Ohio, I had a severe attack of horin fever. On my recovery, I found myself perfectly bald, and, for a long time, I feared I should be permanently se. Friends urged me to use Ayer's Hair and I now have as fine a head of hair as one could wish for, being changed, how-ever, from blende to dark brown."

Began to Grow.

"After a fit of sickness, my hair came out in combfulls. I used two bottles of

Ayer's Hair Vigor

and now my hair is over a yard long and very full and heavy. I have recommended this preparation to others with like good effect."—Mrs. Sidney Carr, 1800 Regina st., Harrisburg, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years and always obtained satis-factory results. I know it is the best preparation for the hair that is made."

-C. T. Arnett, Mammoth Spring, Ark .

Ayer's Hair Vigor

CHAS. STAATS.

(Successor to HUBBARD & STAATS.)

PROPRIETOR OF

City Truck and Transfer Co.

All bills must be settled by the 10th or each month.

Steamer Altona

TO PORTLAND

7:30 a. m., and arriving at Portland at

Leaves Portland Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 6:45 a. m..., Salem for Independence at 4 p. m.

Excellent meals served on boat jat

Passengers save time and money by Unexcelled passenger accommoda-tions. Mitchell, Wright & Co , Gener-al agents, Holman block, Salem, Or.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY

FOR THE

CALIFORNIA

ROUND TRIP TICKETS

GOOD FOR 30 DAYS

SAND RETURN.

$27.50

Including FIVE Gate Ticket

TO THE FAIR.

From an Francisco to other points in Ca forcia will be allowed purchasers of speci Midwinter Fair tickets at the following roun

To Stations under 150 miles from San Francisco, One and One. Third one, way fare.

To Stations 150 miles or more from Sa

For exact rates and full information, inqui

IJ. B. KIRKLAND, District Passeng

Agent, 18t First St., Portland, Or., or addreshe undersigned.

T. H. GOODMAN,
RICHARD GRAY, Gen. Passenger Agt.

Gen. Traffic Manager, San Francisco, Cal.

EXCURSION TRIPS __

and Independence

Independence,

Salem

25 cents per meal.

GREATLY

REDUCED

RATES

Vigor, and, on doing so, my hair

Ave., Santa Cruz, Cal., writes:

CRET SOCIETIES.

U. W .- INDEPENDENCE odke, No. 22, meets every Mon-t in I. O.F. hall. All sojourn-pers are invited to attend. A. J. M.W. W.O. Cook. Recorder.

EY LODGE, NO. 42, I. O. O. Meets in Vendayn's hall every y evening. All Odd fellows cor-ivited to meet with us. W. H. N. G. Zed Rosendorf, Secy.

LODGE, NO. 29, A. F. & Stated communications Satur-ng on or before full moon early and two weeks thereafter. W. P.

MER LODGE, NO. 45 K. of P. Meets every Wednesday evening, nights are cordinaly invited. Blaze , C. C.; D. H. Craven, K. L. & S.

YSICIANS-DENTISTRY.

R S. A. MULKEY, DENTIST, practices the profession in all its thes. Satisfaction guaranteed. hours, 8 to 12 and 1 to 5. Office e O'Donnell brick, Independence.

D. BUTLER, PHYSICIAN AND surgeon. Secy. U. S. board of al Examiners. Office in Opera

L. KETCHUM, M. D. OFFICE and residence, corner Railron donmouth sts., Independence, Or.

L.J. B. JOHNSON, RESIDENT Dentist. All work warranted to the 1 est of satisfaction. Indepen-

RS. LEE & BABBITT, PHYSIcians and Surgeons, Special at-on pald to diseases of women. Of-over Independence National Bank. Lee, M. D. W. Babbitt, M. D. Fellow Trinity Medical College.

ATTORNEYS.

nal Bank.

NHAM & HOLMES, ATTOR-neys at Law. Office in Bush's between State and Court, on Comal street, Salem, Or.

SASH AND DOORS.

ITCHELL & BOHANNON, MANufacturers of sash and doors. scroil sawing. Main street, Inde-

VETERINARY SURGEON.

R. E. J. YOUNG, late of Ne vberg, Veterinary Surgeon and Dentist moved to Independence, and opened flice over the Independence Nation-

TAILORS.

J G. SHARMAN, MERCHANT freight and offers special rates on large . Tailor, C street, near postoffice in any style made to order at rea-

W. E. Poole,

HYSICIAN and SURGEON ice next door to Anstine's Furni-MONMOUTH, OR.

YARD

J. R. COOPER

Of Independence, having a steam gine, a brick machine and several res of finest clay, is now prepared keep on hand a fine quality of rick, which will be sold at reason ole prices.

GEO. E. BREY. DEALER IN

to Hens Illas! in Bon What Princes,

G. L. HAWKINS, Proprietor of snip, latest designs, and lowest prices,

AN INTERESTING STORY IN TWEN-TY CHAPTERS.

A Thrilling Tale Which Illustrates the Fate of Villiany -A Fight for Wealth.

[Published only in the West Sten]

CHAPTER X

MANGAN AND HAYMOND MRET. Mangan had written up the descrip-tive part of the story. He had another day's work to do in hunting up the his-tory of the property in the deeds filed in the office of the county register, going away back to the Hollanders, the earliest settlers, on through the transers under the English and Dutch char-

He took the plots where the smaller pleasure grounds were to be located. Then he turned his attention to the arge tract where the great park was to spring up like a section of fairy land in the metropolis, embellished with ev-ery beauty the bost landscape artist could design.

"Great heavens!" was his ejaculation, and he drew up the heavy volume closer to his sight, while near bysearchers looked at him as if he had gone crazy.
"George Leland," be read, calming lown. "George Leland! Strange! A coincidence; that's all's in it!" The lots were all owned by George Leland, purchased at about the same time from men whose names were known in the history of the county as those of people of quaint manners and methods. They were men who lived in the past. The encroachments of the city jarred upon their country senses, and though they had not much faith in the greater development of the municipality they feared it enough to sell out their homesteads and move farther back from the march of peace destroying progress. The price placed upon the land in the days when Leland bought it was not high. Even in the city people had no idea that this tract would form several wards in the course of time. This is erected old material was used in the Law. Will practice in all state federal courts. Abstracts of title Reasonable Rates.

Outskirts of the town, and no one believed that the roar of traffic would ever be heard behind it. The rear was not minutes with it, and handed it to him. even rough cast. The projectors of the building were not adjudged thoroughly an inclosure of check, and the signature sane, and had they dared to intimate caught his eye. Agents for the O.P. Boats. that any citizen would travel beyond and inspect it from a country view they would have been hooted out of town. The city today runs 10 miles Oregon.

above the city hall. In Brooklyn, which will yet form part of the greater New York, the city hall was built to meet the demands of the growth of 100 years. It failed to supply the needs of 10. The munici-pal building was erected later. Still the city strided out on Long Island, and more room was required in places of public business. There are eight large buildings in that city today occupied by governmental departments, and yet the pleasant little gentleman who has been deputy county treasurer for a quarter of a century, James Gardiner, remembers Leaves Independence and Salem Monday, Wednesday and Friday, teav-ing Independence at 6:45, Salem at the time when if a claim was presented against the municipality the freasurer put his hands into his pockets to see if there was enough change in the treasury to pay the bill. This year the running expenses of the government there will cost over $10,000,000, and the city alone is rich enough to carry the magnificent debt of $50,000,000.

Can the cause of the remarkable increase in the value of the land George Leland acquired 20 years before be better illnstrated?

But was this George Leland the father of Isabel? That was the question forcing itself before Laurence Mangan. It was a wild dream maybe, but he could not get rid of it. So he gathered all his easily? Mother St. Gertrude, this man facts together. He went into the board is a fiend incarnate, walking about with of assessment and found that Leland a fair face that draws his victims close had not paid taxes. He learned in the | to him and to ruin.' arrears department that the lands had been sold, and the skirmish he had with the registrar had been outlined by that worthy official in a way that leaves no need for repetition.

"Maybe this is Isabel's father." mused Mangan, after leaving the registrar's, "and at all events it will do no harm to run him down. If he is alive it will be a good thing to tell him that his neglect of the taxes is about to cost him a loss of millions. I'll see Mother St. Gertrude again. There may be something she has not told me that will help me in this affair.

Mother St. Gertrude received him as cordially as usual.

"What are you after now?" was her greeting. "It's hard to tell." "Well, if you can't tell, I can't, I'm Portland to San Francisco sure. I hope you don't want to see Isabel. I can't consent. It is better for you not to talk to her again until after you come back from Denver. "I do not care to see her until she is willing to explain her strange conduct.' "Then you have given up Isabel?" "By no means. I'm satisfied she will explain all when it suits her. Meanwhile I will spare her and myself the agony of such a meeting as the last. But if she is what I'm half inclined to think she is I will surrender my claim when the evidence is all in, as lawyers say, and the case is proved."

"You will! She is the best girl you ever knew, Laurence; I'm surprised that you have changed so soon. Why, you actually intimate there is something in the past so terrible as to make her unworthy in your eyes.' "You misunderstand me." "I wish I did, Laurence. You have always been so generous and manly." 'Listen to me, Mother St. Gertrude.'

"Say no more," she answered.

epean not of the past, if evil jurk there. Let the dead lie buried, if the resurrection be not glorious. Bring not the spectral reminiscence of wrong to haunt the paths of virtue. Laurence, if you were not so dear to Isabel, discarding her as you do, I would ask you to cave. It is as I feared and told Isabel "Truth pot told her? Who says !

-the truth was not all told her."

did not always speak truly?"
"Not you. I meant another."
"Mother, do not be sarcastic with me.
Another! What other but you has ever spoken to her of her parents? You mean me, but let me tell you now, be-fore you launch into words that sound strangely to me from you, that when I said I would surrender my claim to her I meant to convey a sense of my un-

"What?" interrupted Mother St. Gertrude, whose eagerness to hear the statement delayed its own gratification. "What is she, Laurence, speak the trath?"

"An heiress to millions." "An heiress?"

"An heiross." "Do you know what you are saying.

"Very well, but it is not sure. may leave for a time, but if the news is not good it may be long before you "Tell me all." She walked to a corner of the room and sat down. As Mangan drew his chair close, he caid:

"Now, mother, you've been interrupting me ever since I came here and using queer phrases. You must promise to listen, now, for my story is a lorg one and to you will require many explanations.

"I must promise, I suppose." "Well, not exactly, but make up your mind to listen."

He went over the story again. make it intelligible to her, he had to not surprising to those who recall that give her a summary here and there of when the city hall in New York was certain laws, mentioning not their origin or their originator. He concluded rear, because the building was on the by asking her for the letter she held outskirts of the town, and no one be- from George Leland. She went back

"It is the same, mother, the same Isabel's father is the owner of these lands. This signature is identical with that on the deed! Isabel, as I said, is heiress to millions! She has gained much wealth, and I-I surrender bet love!

"Do you know what relation you are to her?" asked the sister, feeling that now had come the time to unfold the secret.

"Nothing, now." "Yes, I want to tell you she love you, and you will have an equal share with her in those millions when"-"Let me prove they are hers first Her claim will be contested, and I must say we have not yet the evidence that would be accepted in a court of law." This interruption, intended to shu off what he considered to be a prelud to protestations of Isabel's gratitude ended what Mother St. Gertrude would call her confession.

"This letter will go a great way, but it cannot oust Francis Raymond," contipued Mangan.

"Francis Raymond?"

"Yes, he holds the certificates, and we have but a few months' time to circumvent him. I will keep this letter."

"Francis Raymond, the great poli-"The same Francis Raymond." "Isabel is saved! Thank God!"

"Saved! Not yet. Didn't I say he was not likely to hand over the property easily? Mother St. Gertrude, this man

"I was thinking of something else." "What else?" "That"___

There was a loud whir of wheel A cab stopped at the gate of the courtyard, its occupant descended, ran hastily up, and his last step and the ring of the bell sounded almost simultaneously. The door was opened, and Laurence Mangan and Francis Raymond stood face to face.

Lawrence Mangan and Francis Raymond stood face to face.

IN THE PLOTTER'S TOILS, "Hello, Mangan! What are you doing here? Raymond addressed the newspaper of friends.

CHAPTER XI.

"I might as well ask what are you doing here."

"I don't mind telling you. The board "I don't mind telling you. The board of supervisors is supposed to visit asyluma receiving support from the county. I thought Mother St. Gertrude might like to have that disagreeable visit dispensed with by the supervisors in their annual inspection. If so, I was going to send them word to pass the institution by."

"I'm sure it was very kind of you," said Mother St. Gertrude.
"I will do so then. My business is done," he added, turning to Mangan, "Are you going down town, I have a cab outside?" "I'm going," said Mangan, "but I prefer to do a little walking."

worthiness."

"No confession." she replied. "It may lead to another from me or Isabel that would not be to your good just now. A friend is watching over you."

"The Friend that watches over us all. Yes, but what is this confession? You are talking in riddles to me. But let me say a few words and then judge me. I would not press my suit with Isabel because it may come to pass that she la".

"This was no place for a scene. Mangan deemed it best to leave the convent with Raymond. He was satisfied that the politician had lied. What was his mission? Mother St. Gertrude would fain detain Mangan, but she could get no change to give any sign of her wishes. The politician's keen eyes took in everything; nothing could be done that they would not observe. She could not keep Mangan back, and in truth he did not want to stay. He wished to sound Raymond.

truth he did not want to stay. He wished to sound Raymond.

Both walked out together. The sun, sinking behind the chimney tops, cast a lurid glow on the vacant lots around the convent, burnishing the landscape with an iridescence in harmony with the fler; vindictiveness which Raymond felt and from which Mangan was not altogether free. It fed their anger, surchassing their temperaments with its charging their temperaments with its vivid magnetism, strengthening the mood they were in and moving it onward to passion.

"If you're going to walk, Mangan," said Raymond,"I'll dismiss the cab and accompany you."

"As you please," was the answer.

"Now, look here, Mangan," remarked Raymond, after he had paid the cabman, "let us have an understanding. You are unjust to me, especially so since you know how far I would be willing to me for you."

willing to go for you. "You would go no farther for me "Granted, but why not you go as far for me as suits you?"

"Yes, but if you cease to be my en-emy and become my friend you can be rich." "At the expense of the orphan?"

"What do you mean?" "Perhaps you are not aware that you are robbing the orphan of the heritage that is hers."

"I will not say, since you do not con-fess, but let me add that I am not am-bitious or envious of wealth that is acquired by dishonorable "You dare to taunt me.

"And to do more than that, if you

The two men stood and glowered at each other. Both were men of cour-age. Each was conscious of his own strength. Mangan was not anxious to svoid an encounter; in fact, he was aching for an opportunity to punish the man he so thoroughly hated and de-spised. Raymond's better judgment came to guide him, and he laughed as he walked on, saying:

"Come on, Mangan, it doesn't pay me to quarrel with you. I wanted to talk to you about the story you are writing and concerning which you have indulged in some extravaganza."

"I have, eh?" was the contemptuous comment. "How beautifully you phrase ideas that lift the weight of crime from your conscience!"

"I will not argue the point. Are you going to write as rabidly as you have "What if I am?"

"You'll get yourself and your paper into trouble. "Will I? You hold the lands the commission will select, and you think rightful owner cannot eclaim

"The is no one to claim them. If there is, I don't know it."

"I don't expect you to know much that is honest. You excel in knavery." "You are unnecessarily bitter. Now do you know if any one can claim "I can't say that I do."

Raymond took this ambiguous reply wa confession of ignorance. He knew that Mother St. Gertrude had never spoken of Isabel's origin to outsiders, and he had never heard that Isabel had breathed her secret to any one. He felt safe. The name on the deeds would not suggest anything to Mangan, he argued. But the publication? That was his dread.

"I couldn't expect a proofsheet of your article?" queried Raymond, af-fecting a gayety that was not his.

"You can expect nothing but an ex-pose of your peculiar practices."
"You are going into this matter thoroughly."

"Well, I look at it this way: The publication of the story may lead to the discovery of the owners or heirs. If I can do good in that way, I will. At the same time, I will make known the fact that Francis ! Laymond is about to have all this property transferred to

"It wouldn't do me any harm, and it wouldn't do the owners or heirs any good. The time is very short. Wouldn't you like to own some of these lots. Mangan?'

"Your corrupt method may reach the business office of the paper, not me. Try "I will, and then where will you

"You will not try it." "Why not?"

"You are too cunning to leave your-self open to perpetual blackmail by an unscrupulous publisher, even if you should find one in The Bugle office, which I do not believe. I made the suggestion sarcastically, because you have already adopted the practice of bribery and by it earned yourself the title of a good fallow." Highest of all in Leavening Power.-Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

"You think fast and deep," said Raymond, his wily mind suggesting compliments as a change. "I would compliments as a change. 'I would prefer dealing with you. Don't get mad'—as Mangan scowled at him— 'I'm talking as a friend.''

"Better end the conversation here

"Why are you so determined?" "Because justice must follow."
"If there is any one you know who owns any of these lands, I will transfer my certificate in every case. Now, find claimant."

It was a bold stroke. It was a shrewd attempt to sound the depths of Man-gan's knowledge, but Mangan read his purpose and calmly said:

"I cannot accept your proposition.
The claimants will turn up when the story is published. I will select one owner and run him or his heirs down. When I do, I will use that as an example that will draw more general atten-tion to the system that makes men like you rich without the risk that attends common highway robbery. I'll print the story of the commission and of the parks. Later will come the sequel, and I hope that it will photograph you accurately. I have told you, or your intellites, that you enmot escape this eastigation, your first and your last. It will drive you out of town.

"Do not let your imagination run way with you.' "Here's my car," said Mangan.

'I've done enough walking."
"So have I." They stood upon the corner awaiting the car. Mangan felt he could not hope to draw anything from Raymond, who was theroughly familiar with reporterial inquisition. Raymond had also concluded that he could not swerve Mangan from his course. He had resolved bowever, to outwit him in some way story. They boarded the car and sat down together. "Mangan, I have something impor tant to tell you. Where are you going and prevent the publication of a second

"To the office."

"Will you meet me in the evening?" "On what business? "The business we were discussing.

"I will see you. Where?" "There's to be a little banquet to night in the warden's patiers in the penitentiary. You know every one who will be present. The last banquet of this nature was one you newspaper men will not soon forget. It was in the jail A murderer committed suicide while the festivities were at their height, and you boys ran away from the pleasure to the duty of getting out an 'extra. There will be no newspaper man but you there tonight. You may get a splendid exclusive story." "I will go." The conversation by mutual endeav-or, so to speak, drifted into the commonplace. Mangan jumped off the car as it passed The Bugle office and ran into the editorial rooms. "Got your story?" queried the managing editor. "I have and I haven't," was the reon the park sites, the history of the all this property, principally as trustee. He can say he is trustee for the real scaping criticism, if not suspicion. Who can challenge his right?" "Print the facts. Let the people owners and manage it as he pleases,

"I'm goir st to make a proposition to you. Leave out his name. I'm going to Denver on a mission which, if successful, will show he is not a trustee, but a thief whom the law protects. I am glad I took the assignment. My private business is so close to public business that I never would have suspected the relation. Use this story next Sunday. Then wait until you hear from me.

"Your judgment goes, Mangan." hear from me on time."

"Since your private business has taken a public turn, what are you going after?" "I prefer not to say."

"Well, you are still working for The Bugle," said the managing editor. "I'll give you an order on the cashier for your expenses and a month's salary in advance. I'll talk to the publisher. Come in again tonight, You are not overburdened with wealth, I suppose?" "Hardly, but I must decline to take the money. I have enough of my own until I return."

'Very well, then."

Mangan went to his lodgings, packed his trunk and after making ready for his trip to the west went to the penitentiary. He was admitted by the warden. No sconer was he inside than two strong keepers seized him. Mangan looked at the warden and asked, indig-

"What is the meaning of this?" "You are sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary."

"On what charge and by whom?"
"Police Justice Lion's name is signd to the commitment." "Yes, one of the many he signs and leaves his clerk to fill out, while the clerk acts as judge and the judge himself is roistering among sports. I have been trapped, but they will suffer. There is no law by which I can come here except by conviction of an indict-ment found by a grand jury." "A police justice can send you here as a disorderly person."

"And is that the charge?"

"Maybe it is and maybe it isn't. It's a valid commitment. It cites your oflense, your plea and regularly declares you guilty. You can never prove you were not tried in open court."

"The police justice knows."

"And he knows something else."

"That he wants a second term and would perjure himself to get it?"

"That's none of our business. Mr.

Mangan, will you give us your pedigree for record on the books?'

The keepers had led Mangan into the office. The warden had gone behind the rail, opened the book where the record of each criminal is entered, held the pen and awaited Mangan's answer.

"Never!" said the defiant prisoner.

"You're not ashamed of it, Mr. Mangan, are you?"

"No, but it will never be recorded with the history of criminals. I want to know the cause of this?" "It will keep you from making trou-

You ought to know." "I will know. Where is Raymond?" "Here!" said a voice behind him. "You cowardly cur!" said Mangan as he surveyed him scornfully. "This is your work."

Mangan's pockets were being turned inside out. Next the keepers would take him out of the office to the bath and change his civilian dress to the garb of a felon. There was a pile of Mangan's letters on the desk before the warden, and Raymond stepped over and egan to peruse them.

"I'll make you pay for this!" said "Indeed!" sarcastically retorted Raymond. "You will be here for a year.

When you get out, no one will believe your story. If by accident your whereabouts should be discovered, the commitment papers are against you. Do you not know that you are doomed to solitary confinement? Don't bother me. Let me read."

He picked up another envelope. "This is an ancient epistle. And to the superior of the Convent of Mercy. So you have been thieving, eh? You ply. "I have a four column spread here professional moralists are practical ruffians. But I suppose your philosoland and so forth. I understand that phy springs from experience. We'll Raymond holds the certificate to nearly see what's inside. It may be of value to Mother St. Gertrude.

He drew forth the inclosure. Mangan watched him to note the effect. Raymond's face flushed, the demon of evil seemed to posses him, and he shook the letter in Mangan's face. "The penitentiary is the place for you. You'll read the result of this at the end of 'the next three months, and I'll be more master then than now. Warden, give me a match. The warden and keepers were surprised. The warden came from behind the railing, closed the doors leading to the corridors, a premonition of some-thing dreadful making him cautious to limit the number of witnesses. After this he advanced to Raymond, handing "Your judgment goes, Mangan." him a box of matches. Raymond lit one, applied it to an end of the letter, evening. You may not have word from which he held until it burned close to me for a couple of weeks. But you'll his fingers, and then, pressing the charred corner between his forefinger and three it into Mangan's face, (To be continued

At Paso Robles a white women waltzed with a negro and the woman husband shot at the colored man. Since the episode the race feeling has been growing bitter in Paso Robles, and the other day a red-ink-skull-and-crosbones placard was posted in conspicuous places, warning a number of negro to leave town.

AWARDED HIGHEST HONORS WORLD'S FAIR.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.-No Ammonia: No Alum Used in Millions of nes-40 Years the Standard