The live church must then prove by its fruits its right to live. But again the live church must be evangelie, a missionary church. By this I mean that it is to broadminded. liberal and sympathetic. Not stilted nor airistocratic. It must show itself a force unto the elevation and purifying of social life. It must prove itsela firm and abiding friend of the man behind the bench, as well as the man behind desk or counter; the man in labor life, as well as professional life. It must lessen the ever widening breach between the masses and religion, and it must, in fact become what the church was in Apostolic times, and what the Savior intended it should be: a force unto the salvation of the word; not a select few. Hence the live church must be missionary in its spirit.

But the second scripture tells us of sent me, even so send I you.

The church's mission on which Chris was sent to open the understanding of men; to reveal gospel truth; to manifest the will of God; and as He was thus sent, even so He sends the live church . No great things are laid at our door, for us to accomplish, but they are the things, which are most natural for us, and which are within our powers. He says to His church, which is ever live church: "I send you to carry my love to men, who need it, and to manifest the love of my Father". To fulfil its true mission this church, to which I have endeavored to minister in the past; must carry the comfort, hope joy and fire of His love unto the sin and pain of life, and thus demonistrate by
