A Long Way From Home.

Yesterday's morning train brought a curious consignment of freight to the agent here. It was a crate containing two hound pups about a year or eighteen months old, and three fox cubs or call them.

The crate and contents came from Smithfield, Ill., and was addressed to A McBeth living near Lewisville. The hounds are beauties and show good blood and speed. It is to be hoped, however, that the box will be taken out of town as quickly as possible in order to give the public health a show Dogs are man's best friends and foxes are handsome, intelligent animals, but if the rich perfume pouring from that crate doesn't create civil war or the Asiatic cholera in less than 48 hours there is no balm in Gilead

Odd Fellows Will Celebrate.

Next Friday the Odd Fellows of this city will celebrate in a becoming manner the 76th anniversary of the founding of that order, and a program has been prepared which will not fail to please everybody who attends. A large number of visiting members are expected from outside points and great preparations have been made to insure the success of the entertainment.

CAME BACK TO THAW OUT.

September and Wants a Change.

After an absence of marly a year and At the Baptist church Rev. J. Fred a half E. H. Hosh r, a former citizen of Jenkins will preach at the regular Polk county, returned from the northern ice beit of the East, Mr. closuer arrived in Monmouth, his sormer home, last Wednesday, acrone , sanied by his family.

Toursday morning Mr. Hower paid this office a visit and read the editor a long lecture on the folly of leaving such a country and climate as this to go back East and freeze to death.

"I've come tack to thaw out," he exclaimed, pulling his chair into the sunshine. "I've been frozen up since iast September and have had enough day of that experience to fast me the rest of my life. If the people here only knew how much better off they are out herewhy the climate is a perfect heaven compared to that of southern Michigan where I was. While I was back there a man was buried-he died first, of course-and the man who dug the grave said the ground was frozen solid all the way down, about five feet.

"A man stands no show in the East; there are no transactions in property, no activity in business, and the cold weather is sim, ly terrible. It was down to 20 degrees below zero a number of times. I've come back to stay this time and will resume business with my old partner, B. M. Sloan, in the contracting and building line, over at Monmouth. Oregon is good enough

THE NEW STEAMER.

It Will Make Changes of Advantage to Independence.

The people of this city have been greatly interested in the steamboat issues now before the public, as this city would very likely be affected by any changes in that line. The question of a light draught boat to make the round trip from Salem to Corvalia or Albany has been under consideration for some time, and the captain of the Altona being one of the prime movers in the scheme, a reporter approached him for information.

Captain Graham could not state definitely when the boat would be built or when any change would be made, but expressed the opinion that it would not be long before the shippers of the different points along the river would see the absolute necessity of such boat as he proposed building and the superintendent of the school pastor. The topic will be, "For what it would be finished in time for use other enthusiastic church works before next low water. This light children of the Presbyterian 8 draught boat will ply between Salem school had prepared a very full and up-river points, while the Altona interesting program. The es would make daily trips from Portland to Salem, and connect with the other steamer at Salem.

This, instead of injuring Independence in any way, would be an advantage. It would give daily boats to Portland, return trips to Salem, increased opportunities to ship perishable kittens or pups, or whatever you might goods either up or down river, and also make the hours of arrival and fusion of beautiful, fragrant flows departure more convenient. The only drawback would be the loss to the city of boat's officers and their families, and the fact that Independence would no longer be the terminus of the Altona's route. Taking it all in all, however, the change would be of benefit to the town, as far as commerce is concerned.

Dislocated His Shoulder.

By the fall of a seat at the school exerci-es in Buens Vista, Thursday evening Robert Emmons had his shoulder dislocated. The hall was crowded and the bench, upon which a number were seated, gave way with the foregoing reault.

The sufferer came down to Independence to secure proper surgical attention, and returned to his home Friday to receive his diploma. Owing to his injuries he was unable to read his carefully prepared essay at the graduating exercises.
