

OF FAMOUS MEN

Social Leaders in All Parts of the Country.

Washington Quarters.

Mrs. Stonewall Jackson's Quiet Life in North Carolina—Mrs. Jeff. Davis—Mrs. G. W. Childs in Retirement.

The widow of one of the best known and probably the best loved man in America, George W. Childs, has always led a quiet, retired life that Philadelphia as a rule life very little of her, and the outside world nothing at all. General Bonner Childs was a slender, little, dark-eyed woman, whose main interest in life seems to be the well being and care of her household. She has never been a society woman, and has rarely been seen in society, the theatre and opera having no attractions for her.

She has lived in the great white marble mansion during the winter for many years, going to the spring in the country seat, Wootton. Mrs. Childs has left the Philadelphia mansion for good since the death of her devoted husband, and she will soon build a house in Washington and make that city her home.

Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, widow of the hero of the Confederacy, lives in Charlotte, N. C., with her sister, Mrs. Mary Ann Jackson. She has been busily engaged for several years in writing the life of her famous husband, and has almost ruined her eyesight in her labor of love. Her grandchildren, Mrs. Julia Jackson Christian, the children of her only child, Julia Jackson, who died five years ago, live with her, and are the joy and comfort of her life.

MRS. JEFF. DAVIS HAS YOKER. Mrs. Jefferson Davis has chosen New York as her abiding place, and spends much of her time there in her pleasant apartment in Marlborough street. In the spring she usually spends a month or more at West Point. That place is full of associations for her of her husband, who was a graduate of the military school. Her daughter, Miss Winnie Davis, is very popular socially, especially among the Southern colony, and Miss Winnie has added literature to her many accomplishments and has just completed a novel which is said to be very clever.

Mrs. James G. Blaine has two homes, one in Washington, where so many sorrowful crowds flock upon her, and the beautiful summer home at Bar Harbor. Mrs. Blaine is a cold, reserved woman, who has never been very popular socially. All her life and soul seemed to be centered in her distinguished husband, and without him she seems to be lost indeed. She spends much of her time in traveling and the Washington house is rarely opened here.

Mrs. John A. Logan, with her patriarchal face and snow white hair, is probably the most picturesque of the military widows. She is a very rich woman, and has made a fortune since the death of her husband. She is a shrewd business woman and an able financier. She has been at heart just now the success of Bishop Hurst's school. Her husband has promised to raise $1,000,000 for this institution, and it is likely she will succeed.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, one of the few famous widows who made their fame for themselves is alive and well.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stanton, not everybody knows that she is eighty-two years, lives quietly in a pretty little apartment on the West Side in New York, and that she has lately written a book which is particularly interesting in the Woman's Version of the Bible, and hopes to live to see the completion of the work she and her colleagues have begun.

Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, a sister seventy-five, but still a young, energetic woman still. Last winter Mrs. Hooker journeyed to Southern California, but will return in time to spend her summer at her beautiful home in Hartford, Conn.

HANDSOME MRS. SHERIDAN. Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

LIVELY MRS. DREW. Mrs. John Drew at seventy-six is as active as a kitten. Her theatrical company owes almost all of its success to her clever dancing and exquisite acting. Mrs. Drew is to the young actress, the inspiration which made Joe Jefferson the most of the actor.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, divides her time between New York and Washington. She has not been in the city since she will buy her future home. Mrs. Grant realized almost $500,000 from the memorial of her husband, and the government allows her a pension of $5,000 a year so she can live in comfort. She has four children and twelve grandchildren, who make her life a very full and pleasant one.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the only girl of the Grant family, was a bride of the White House twenty years ago. She married a young Englishman and

RECK THE RIPPER.

How He Was Finally Captured Through the Medium of Robert James Lees.

It has been whispered more than once that "Jack the Ripper" had been captured. The name of the man who had been captured before Dr. Howard told the story in detail to William Greer Harrison in San Francisco.

About three months ago the Enquirer contained a most interesting account which pointed directly to Robert James Lees as the man who had detected the criminal, but corroborative testimony and detail were lacking. The story of the capture of the Ripper was itself one of the dozen London physicians who sat as a court of inquiry upon a brother physician and found him guilty of the appalling crimes which shocked the civilized world. Dr. Howard did not reveal the name of the monster, it is true, but he disclosed facts which have unsealed other lips and he now knows the history of his most unusual criminal.

JACK THE RIPPER. The name of the physician in good standing in London, an enthusiastic yachtsman who, through some extraordinary perversion, came to look upon pain with pleasure, and to take keen delight in the suffering of other folk, was named Robert James Lees. It is said that one of his favorite pastimes was to remove the eyelids from a rabbit and expose it for hours in a fixed position to a blinding light.

None of the keepers know that the man who sits in his padded cell from side to side in his padded cell and makes the long watches of the night with his piercing cry is the famous "Jack the Ripper." To this day the name of the murderer is simply known as Thomas Mason, alias No. 124.

AN ESSAY ON "PLAY" "Tenny" Claffin Writes Entertainingly.

She Says Humanity Does Not Play Enough.

Our Schools Should Be Workshops and Playhouses—Too Much Rote and Cramming.

(By Lady Cook, nee Tennessee C. Claffin.)

The first conscious act of a human being is to play. No sooner does the babe observe and recognize that it begins to be mortal. As it grows it develops its innate proclivity by all sorts of merry trifling and gambols. And its healthfulness of mind and body depends as much upon its exercise of playfulness as upon its daily work.

THE VISION CONFIRMED. The ninth murder came off on schedule time and the ears of the victim were marked, they were both alike, the manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS. Many fairly educated people violate every day of their lives a nice distinction in the use of adjectives and adverbs. This is not a matter of appearance, feel, look, and shine, which, according to their meaning, are either modified by one or completed by the other. When the verb expresses a quality in the subject it must be completed by an adjective; as, Dorothy is ill and looks very bad; Marguerite looked beautiful last night; these are the only ones that are marked. Their appearance, manner of action, the little girl looked shyly around the room (manner of using her eyes). If you are sick you undoubtedly feel bad; but the ninth murder, the victim was around awkwardly for a chair, and you may feel a loss keenly. It is just as correct as you felt confused.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan has continued to live since the death of her husband in the house on Washington street in Washington, which was presented to the general when he went to Washington to succeed General Sherman. Mrs. Sheridan leads a very exclusive, dignified life, only occasionally taking part in the social life of the capital. She is a young woman compared with the other generals' wives, and is very handsome and distinguished looking. She devotes much of her time to the education of her four children, Philip, who will enter West Point as soon as he is old enough, and her daughters, May, Irene and Louise.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is one of the most delightful of all of the famous widows. She is eighty-four years of age, but so pleasing in face and manner, so young in heart and thought, that it is hard to realize that she has passed many milestones of a way sometimes weary and rough to tread. She lives in a pretty apartment surrounded by pictures, books, and all sorts of reminiscences of her distinguished husband. All of her faculties are unimpaired, and she is thoroughly informed on all the questions of the day, and prepared and delighted to discuss them.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson was once the first lady of the land, when her uncle, James Buchanan, was president, and she was charming, gracious Harriet Lane. After the death of her husband, Henry Elliott Johnson, she went back to Washington to live. She has one of the handsomest residences in the capital, and goes a great deal into society.

GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW. General Grant's widow, Mrs.