Y., the voting machines made it possible for the first return to be given to the public within six minutes after the closing of the polls, while the final rerurns were declared just thirty-one minutes later. The entire result was known three-quarters of an hour after he closing of the polls. From all of this it will be conceded that voting by machine has many desirable features. The reduction of the cost of holding elections, the speed with which the votes can be taken, and the speed with which returns can be made, all important elements to consider.

Once adopted by law, the inanimate faces of these engines formed to tell what the people want will be the medium of stopping foolish contests, which cost the people heavy sums of money. One lack will yet remain, however. Complete purification of the ballot cannot be effected until some device is perfected which will insure absolute security and legality in the registration of voters themselves, whereby a corrupt man may be prevented from registering under the name of some other man long dead or removed from the city. When such a device is created and why may not photography and other science abet ?- then voting will become an accurate expression of the people's will. The reign of "the boss" will end, for the entire electorate will be ballots, it may be stated that in the New York election of 1897 some 122,086 ballots were thrown out as blank or defective. Add to this the fact that in the city of Chicago It costs $75,000 merely to hold an election for two judges, and some of the defects of the Australian system may be understood.

For these and many other reasons the public mind is dwelling carnestly making a click at intervals to indicate on the theme of voting by machinery. It is certain that the voting machine would in time be able to defeat the move the pointers silently, with a little workings of the party machine. Several things are asserted in its favor factorily, he is now ready to register it, that appeal strengly to the honest which he does by throwing the curtain conducting elections, which is brought with which he closed it, thus casting about by the increased speed in ballot- and counting his vote in perfect seing, and the consequent reduction in crecy. ment, and, in order to understand the workings of the new system, a typical case would be that of a great city like Chicago. Here there are 1,120 precincts, with an average of 328 registered voters. Five men to the precinct are officials at every election, and each man receives $5 daily. The city sets aside $124,600 for salaries of these judges and clerks. The rental of the precinct headquarters averages $15. The ballots cost over $5,000. When the care, keeping and distributing expenses are added this cost is doubled or trebled. The office expenses of the commissioners are also extremely heavy.

Without too close analysis a saving could be effected by the use of machinery that can be shown at once. It is estimated that on this basis the number of voting precincts could be rewould be done away with. Of course the care of the machines would be an expense, although not nearly so heavy. On an equitable table of reduction, after careful computation, it is calculated that the enormous sum of $57,000 could be saved on every city election.
