On Monday morning the O. R. & N. Company's steamer Gypsy, bound from Corvallis to Portland with a cargo of flour, mill feed and wool, ran on a sunken snag just below this city and she pitched a hole in her bottom. She filled and sunk in ten feet of water. Many people from town went down to see how a sunken boat looked.

The Modoc came from Salem in the evening to assist in raising the Gypsy. A good deal of the cargo was saved. It will take some time to patch up the boat and in the meantime no boat will cover the route.

A. B. Gibson, of this county, has recently invented a washer, and last week received his letters patent for the device. The invention is a washer, which can be readily applied to shafting and other parts of machinery, to take up the wear and without the necessity of removing any of the parts of the machine, and which, when applied, will be held permanently in place. The washer when closed, is of the ordinary kind, but it has a removable section or key which fits into an opening in the side of the washer, and when the two parts are joined, make a complete circle. This invention is doubtless a valuable one, and much sought after by machinists when its existence becomes generally known.

Chinese pheasants are plentiful about here just now, and they are tame too. While sitting in our office door, the other evening we saw an old china rooster come out of the bushes in front of Ed Hilliard's blacksmith shop, flap his wings and crow as if in defiance. Just wait, old boy, until October comes, then see who will crow.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, Cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the drugstore here and informed me that one dose cured him and he is again at his work." For sale by Kirkland Drug Co.

Boers as American Immigrants.

There are indications that the close of the war in South will witness a considerable immigration from that region to the United States. Report has it that one of the objects of the Boer commissioners in coming to this country was to meet some of the officials connected with the immigration societies and learn the opportunities afforded for the settlement of large numbers of their race in some of the Western states or territories. One of the Boer agents filed this report, but it has been denied that some of the railroad companies have been making propositions to the commissioners looking to the settlement of considerable numbers of their countrymen in the West. This particular commissioner expressed himself as favorably impressed with the friendliness of the Americans toward his people, and thought highly of the advantages which would be afforded to them if they should locate in the United States, though he says most of them will remain at home and live under the British flag.

But whether the majority of the Boers remain in their own land under the British domination or not, it is reasonably certain that many of them will be found among the annual influx of immigrants to this country hereafter. Thus far they have not figured with any prominence among the alien arrivals in this country, but a change in this respect is reasonably certain to take place from this time onward. It was estimated that the number of immigrants to the United States between the treaty of peace in 1783 and the year 1820, when statistics on this point began to be collected for the first time, was 250,000. At that particular time the number of alien arrivals was small, being less than 10,000 in 1820, although the number was much greater in some of the previous years of the century, before exact figures were collected. The failure of the potato crop in Ireland in 1846, however, and the rebellions in many of the countries of Europe in 1848-9, including Austria, Prussia and some of the other German states as well as in Ireland and Hungary, sent the volume of immigrants to the United States up to high figures. Over 18,000,000 immigrants have arrived in this country since 1820, two-thirds of them since 1850.

Once there was a time when the United States could say, in the words of the old song, that "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." This condition is true in a considerable degree to this day, although the country has three times as many inhabitants now as it had at the time when those words were first heard. The public lands are still far from being exhausted. The quantity, the fertility and the cheapness of lands in the United States, coupled with the freedom from oppression and the opportunity for every one to carve out his own destiny in his own way, was the chief consideration which impelled immigrants to come to this country when the conditions in their own land were no longer bearable. Millions of acres of public lands still remain in the United States, and other millions of acres can be obtained at low figures. Nearly all the states west of the Mississippi and some of those east of the river have lands which can be got so cheaply as to be an attraction for settlers from all over the world. In the list of immigrants landing on the shores of the United States are some from almost every country in the world, though the two little republics of South Africa have thus far contributed but slightly to the total. A change in this particular is likely to take place now. A large part of the next great trek of the Boers from the Orange Free State and the Transvaal will undoubtedly be to the Western states of the American Republic.—Globe Democrat.

Professor W. H. Whitaker expects to go to Albany next Tuesday to remain two or three weeks. He has several patients and friends at that point who desire to take treatment.

A Good Cough Medicine. It speaks well for Chamberlain's Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following the grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by Kirkland Drug Co.

The Toy Dog. A copy of Mr. John E. Diehl's latest book on the Toy Dog has just been submitted to us for criticism. We can speak of the neat little volume only in terms of the highest praise. The author, who was recognized for years as an authority on domestic pets of all kinds, has evidently put his best efforts on his last production, so that this becomes almost invaluable to all who admire, or intend to provide themselves with a Toy Dog. The book has been published by the Associated Fanciers, 500 North Third St., Philadelphia, Pa., who offer to mail it to any address on receipt of 25 cts., preferably in postage stamps.

Christopher P. Zumwalt, a pioneer of 1845, died June 6 at his home, near Perrydale, in this county. He was born in Missouri, August 12, 1827. He married Irene Goodrich in August, 1849, and settled in Polk county two years later. Mr. Zumwalt made farming and stock-raising a business, from which he had accumulated valuable property. He was a local preacher of the United Brethren Church. In the Rogue River Indian War of 1846 he served under Captain Felix Scott. He was a man of great energy and force of character, strictly honest, and a good neighbor. He left a wife and eight children—Mrs. Ann Sargeant, of Perrydale; Henry O., of Southern Oregon; Mrs. Mary Livermore of Eugene; Mrs. Sarah Undergraff, of Perrydale; Glen B., of Perrydale; William B., of Oregon City; Gilford L., of Perrydale, and Frank, Dallas.

The annual report of the county school superintendent of Polk County was filed in the state department a few days ago. It shows decreases in the school population, in attendance and the length of the school year. There are increases in the number of persons of school age not attending any school, and also in both receipts and expenditures.
