Port Townsend, Wash., Dec. 27.—Each tug boat arriving from Cape Flattery brings fresh news of marine disasters along the coast, and when the full returns are in the damage by the recent succession of gales will be the largest in the history of shipping along the Pacific Coast.

After passing out of the Straits of Fuca, the Carl encountered a gale which continued several days, and was roughly handled by the elements that the stanchions of the bulwarks were pulled out, and as the great waves swept her decks the water poured in so rapidly that the pumps could not keep her clear. The cargo of wheat became waterlogged, and so rapidly did the water come that the pumps were unable to keep her clear.
