Old-time pranks, old-time places, and the lore of old-time chums breathe through the story to a theme that carries laughter irresistibly.

A Considerate Act. Capt. Spang, of the steamer Pomona, as he came up the river on his way to Salem on Monday evening, says the Statesman, found a cow stuck in the mud on the bank of the river. He stopped his boat and with the assistance of his crew, pulled the unfortunate bovine out of the mud, put her on terra firma, and sent her on her way homeward. Then the boat proceeded on up the river, the captain not thinking he had done anything more or less than his duty. But this writer would like to remark that a man who is thus considerate of the welfare of a poor dumb creature, could not show a less consideration for the feelings or safety of sentient beings. As he is "done his duty" by the cow, he will do by all God's creatures.

To Read Character from the Face. To read a person's character from his face is an accomplishment which few possess, but which many would like to have. The study is an absorbingly interesting one, and has not only an entertaining, but a practical side as well. An article on the subject will shortly be published in The Ladies' Home Journal, giving careful details regarding the traits of character indicated by the different features of the face.

Lean Diet for a Litch Figure. Most people eat to much meat. Those who do not work at hard labor and wish to have perfect digestion should not eat more than once a day. Women in general health, and feeble persons in particular, will enjoy better health on a light diet.

Children fed on meat are from the overburdened state of the blood, restless, bad sleepers and liable to fatal attacks of fever. Graham bread fresh made a good food. These are rich in the element that nurtures the body, supply it with the necessary heat and consume little time in digesting.

On a diet of this sort, varied with the season's foods, children and young people will thrive and grow pretty, and young women need have no fear of taking on cushions of disfiguring fat—N. Y. World.

Eugene Register: Some time ago our esteemed evening contemporary stated that a threshing-machine was in operation near Co. Register. The Register a few days later corrected the mistake, but for fear of disturbing the equanimity of the Guard editor did not refer to any paper in the matter. Now comes the Roseburg Plaindealer with the following libel on the agricultural editor of the Register: "Last week the editor of the Eugene Register took a drive to the country and in a field adjacent to Eugene saw a hay baler at work. He returned to town and reported through his paper that threshing-machines had started up in that vicinity, and now the farmers have the laugh on him. It is probably Editor Gilstrap, who last Spring on seeing a rolling clod crusher passing through town was informed that the farmer was going to roll his oat field with the machine, and whereupon the editor remarked, "I've often wondered how they made rolled oats."

After praying long and earnestly for her husband, a Eugene woman asked her pastor what more could she do to induce him to stay home nights, he advised, adding to his home comforts something that he was enjoying away from home. The next day the woman was looking up the price of beer by the keg.

The strawberry-growers in the comparatively small community of Hood River received $85,000 for their crop this summer, and for the rest of the year can take it comparatively easy and let the rest of the people do the worrying about the crops, prices and the problem of deficit or surplus. The Hood River people are not rich in large areas of land or big bank accounts, but they are easily and contentedly prosperous.

Van Cleave, "the first white baby born in the Northwest" is still vigorous of mind and actively interested in the world's affairs. She lives in Minneapolis, Minnesota.
