What that section needs is a few more good shakes and in the course of time it may become fit for white people to live in—Salem Journal.

THE RHYMING SUMMARIST

With quacking geese a moving north
And barefooted kids are going,
With clean white dresses on the girls
And men in gardens hoeing—
Seems that the moment has arrived
Before the fans are waving
That some must rub
In the old bath tub
And do their annual bathing.
Send the old duds to the wash,
Lyeing well the water
And get the clean ones all broke in
Before it gets much hotter;
"What the deuce you driving at?"
Many, no doubt, are thinking,
"Can't you smell?"
Then, O, well!
Someone's feet are stinking.
Sadie called on yesterday
Looking plump and fatter,
The smiles were beaming in her face,
Something was the matter
No longer that sick cat stare,
But happy as they make 'em,
And cheeks aglow
Without the "co."
Didn't have to fake 'em.
"We're stepping high these days," she said,
"In Thirty One Eight Six Three,"
And none of the chickens around this town
Can hang a streak of smoke and dust
From Greenwood down to Parker,
You'll know its us
In our good bus
