George W. Conner, the aggressive young farmer from near Sheridan, should receive the Republican nomination for clerk Friday. His opponents are John C. Uglov of Dallas and Floyd D. Moore, school supervisor. If electing Moore clerk would abolish the superfluous office of school supervisor it would be all right, but unfortunately it does not, and if we have to have a school supervisor why Moore is just the fellow to keep on the job; because he is "broke in." He should not ask the people to take him out of a place he likes so well. Conner is the man for clerk.

Steelquist Stays
C. V. Steelquist, manager of the Oregon Power Co. in Polk county, will not be transferred as was announced last week, but will remain in the place he is now occupying.

Pants, Chants and Rants

Dear Beloved Editor:

Call this "Pants, Chants and Rants";

As the cock crows

In the morning

Is he on the old time

Or the new?

Somebody some time

Will get up

To see

But it won't

Be me

Or Ross Nelson

While we are

Charter members

Of the midnight crew

We slip to bed

At half past two

And are dead

To the world

When roosters who;

We're always willin'

To see eight reels thru

But what do we care

What chickens do.

WILLY SHAKESPEARE.

Casting your bread upon the waters is all right, but some of this war bread won't float.

THE French of today are famous as pastry makers, but they would not now think of using the crude methods pictured here that were employed by them some centuries ago. They, like ourselves, must have a in order to produce the toothsome dainties that are demanded. Our customers tell us that our pastries are always as good and frequently better than the home kind. The secret is baking genius plus modern equipment.

Quality and cleanliness are the twin mottoes of this bakery at all times.

Kentucky, their home having been situated three miles from Lexington. Virility speaks in his manner and he is keenly alert and interested in the things of today. Mrs. Claggett, who was threatened with pulmonary trouble in early life, is still in good health and bears witness to the longevity of Oregon pioneers, the men and women who made the beginnings of Portland and the state.

"THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY" IS SUNDAY

"Damn the United States—I wish I may never hear of the United States!" John Alton, a conscientious pacifist, utters this curse at a time when he is angered by the scorn of his patriotic friends, and dejected by the loss of his sweetheart, Bertha Norton, who considers him a slacker. He is induced to read Edward Everett Hale's famous story, "The Man Without a Country," and the incidents seem to him like a replica of his own life in a previous existence. As Lieutenant Philip Nolan, U. S. A., he sees himself on trial for the identical curse against the United States, uttered by himself; then condemned to pass the rest of his life as an unshackled prisoner on board a warship without ever hearing of the country to which he belonged; and eventually dying in his cabin with a benediction for the flag of the United States.

The visualization of the story quickens in John Alton the dormant sense of responsibility to his country, and he becomes a recruit at Fort Slocum.

Meanwhile Bertha has been a Red Cross nurse in France. The ship on which she is returning to America is attacked by an enemy submarine, and the wreck floating in mid-ocean presents a triumph to film realism. Whether Bertha was saved from the wreck to resume the interrupted romance with her former lover is fully revealed in the final reel. Apart from its stirring patriotic spirit the picture offers seven reels of engrossing entertainment.
