and the second s

The Confessions of a German Deserter

Written by a Prussian Officer Who Participated in the Ravaging and Pillaging of Belgium,

Copyright by Detroit Free Press (Continued from Tuesday)

CHAPTER XIV.

The entire forest of Argonne was blown to pieces when we arrived. Everywhere was artillery, which maintained a fire on the villages behind the enemy's positions.

One of the many batteries which we constantly had to pass on our march from the camp to the front, was in action when we reached it.

I asked one of the gunners what his objective was and he replied that it was any village within range.

A substitute first lieutenant, in charge of the battery, stood nearby. One of my comrades asked him if he did not think there might be women and children in those villages.

"That would make no difference," the first lieutenant replied. "Women and children are French, so what does it matter? This breed has to be exterminated in order that this nation shall not think of war again for a cen-

This day was designated for a ment No. 67 was ordered to attack. Pioneers led the way. They were supplied with hand grenades. These weekbefore the infantry went over by a action required very careful calculation because the distance which separated our position from the enemy's was very slight. It varied from three to one hundred meters; never any more. At the point where we attacked the distance was 20 meters.

Promptly at eight o'clock the artillery started. The first three shells struck a ditch, but the following ones hit fairly, that is, right in the French trenches. Once the artillery had the proper range whole salvos of batteries descended upon them with admirable exactness. The cries of the wounded were heard once more, a sign that many had been hit.

An artillery officer acted as observer in the foremost sense and directed the fire by phone. Promptly at 8:30 o'clock the artillery fires stopped and we attacked. The eleventh company of the 'ty-third and Thirty-fourth divisions. Sixty-seventh regiment, of which I Neither the crown prince nor Von Mudspoke before, came under the fire of 'ra had ever been seen in the trenches, the enemy's machine guns and 18 of its One of the members on the crown men were killed after they had only prince's staff was the old field marproceeded a few steps outside the trench. Dead and wounded men lay among the branches and the trees everywhere man flend. These three called Clover on the ground. Every man who was able to run sped forward to reach the enemy trench as quickly as possible. A part of the enemy defended itself desperately in a trench filled with water and mud. A terrible hand-to-hand fight resulted. We stood in water up to our mud, holding their mouths and noses the cost of thousands of lives. He was above the water. During the fighting | rery well liked among the high officers, they were trampled more deeply into the dirt under our feet for we could not see where we were going; we could only "roll up" the entire trench.

The section won was fortified with all possible haste. Once more we had acquired at a heavy cost in human life a few meters of the Argonne forest. This trench, which we took, had changed hands many times and even now we were preparing for the usual counter-attacks.

Presently the "jackasses" went into action. The "jackasses" are the guns of the French mountain artillery. They were so named because they were drawn by mules. They are guns of flat trajectory, kept from 50 to 100 meters behind the enemy lines. The shells from these cannon flew directly over our heads and cut their way through the branches at a high rate of speed. Because of the high velocity of the shell and the short distance it travels the detonation when the shot is fired and the noise of the explosion, sound almost at the same instant. These "jackasses" are greatly feared by the German soldiers because they are kept working day and night.

It was winter and very cold. The trenches had been filled with water and were now nothing except deep ditches of mud. Under these conditions, through the ice-cold nights, our routine consisted of 48 hours duty and 12 hours rest. Every week a storming attack was made, the success of which was entirely out of proportion to the enormous losses. In all of the four months I was in the Argonne forests we gained 400 meters. The following data will indicate how heavy a price was paid in lives for this little piece of France.

Each regiment had its own cemetery. There was the One Hundred and Forty-fifth infantry regulars, the Sixtyseventh, and One Hundred and Seventy-third infantry regulars and the One Hundred and Fifth Hirschberg battalion. On the day we were relieved from duty in the Argonne forests there were more dead in these storming attack and we were obliged cemeteries than there were survivors to be in our positions at seven o'clock of the several regiments. The Sixtyin the morning. Promptly at 8:30 regi- seventh regiment had more than 2,000 dead. All the victims were members of that unit except a few pioneers, who had been assigned to duty with ly attacks were opened half an hour it. There was never a day without some loss of life, and on the days when storm of artillery fire. The artillery the storming attacks were made, death had an extremely large harvest.

CHAPTER XV.

Each day in the Argonne levied its toll of victims, sometimes many, sometimes only a few. It is only natural that the morale of the soldiers should not be at its best under these circumstances. With the same indifference that the men had once gone to their work to support their wives and children they now went into action. This business of killing had become daily routine. Whenever we discussed our situation, the crown prince and the commander of the Sixteenth army corps, Lieutenant General von Mudra, fared worst.

The troops in the Argonne forest belonged to the Sixteenth corps, the Thirshal, Count von Haeseler, former commander of the Sixteenth corps, who, before the war, was considered a hu-Leaf by the soldiers, were far more despised by most of the men than were the French cannon, which sought our miserable lives.

The Hobenzollern heir did not find life hard at his hendquarters several cllometers behind the battle front. It was easy for him to make himself Men, severely wounded, lay in the popular with his order to go ahead at with whom he sat behind a stove although the progress was not fast enough for them. He honored Von Mudra with the order "Pour la Merite," but of the soldiers he never had a thought.

They had not seen a bed for months. They were never given a chance to remove their clothing. They received only shells and steel and were almost eaten up by vermin. They were covered with lice. There was scarcely enough water for drinking purposes, to say nothing of water for washing their clothes. Our hair and beards were long and when we were given some hours of rest the lice would not let us sleep. While we were in the trenches the bullets did not do much damage but daily men were killed by indirect fire. The thousands which whizzed through the air every minute flew over our heads. They struck trees or branches and

Each Day Levled Its Toll of Victims. gianced off, striking the men in the trenches. Failing to pierce their object directly they tore terrible gaping wounds as they entered the men's bodies sideways. Whenever we heard charges concerning dum-dum bullets, we thought of these cross-shots, although we never doubted the existence of the dum-dums.

Whether or not dum-dum bullets were made in the munitions factories I cannot say. I suspect they were. However, I did see many dum-dum bullets made by the soldiers themselves. The points were filed off from German musket shells so that the nickel covering was perforated, baring the lead filling

The bullet flattened when it struck its object. If, for instance, it entered a man's arm, the explosive charge in it uld so shatter the entirely off and leave it hanging by the skin.

German soldiers were frequently seen supplying themselves with dumdum bullets in the trenches, preparing to inflict terrible wounds.

On January 5, 1915, the Germans attacked on their entire front of the Argonne forest sector and several hundred prisoners were taken. The handto-hand fight continued until six o'clock in the evening.

A fellow pioneer and myself found ourselves in a bit of trench held by eight Frenchmen. It was impossible to retire so we accepted the unequal fight. Fortunately we were well supplied with hand grenades.

We cut the fuses short so that they would explode as quickly as possible. I threw one among the eight soldiers. Before the men could get out of the way of the first, the second one followed, which exploded in their midst,

We took advantage of the confusion thus created to hurl five more. Our enemies were now reduced to four men. We opened fire with our muskets, closing in on the four. Their bullets whizzed around our heads. One man was shot in the mouth. That left three. They turned and tried to flee.

In such moments as these one is in a great rage and forgets danger entirely. We were very close to our enemies now, right on their heels when the last man stumbled and fell.

I sprang on top of him. He defended himself with his fists, My comrade went after the other two. Bleeding at the mouth, this man fought on. After I had knocked several of his teeth out he raised his hands and surrendered. released him from my grip and looked him over carefully. He was about thirty-five years old. He showed me his wedding ring and talked to me. I knew what he wanted, he wanted his

He gave me his canteen that I might drink some wine and wept. Perhap: he thought of his wife and children. I pressed his hand and he showed me his bleeding teeth. I called him a fool and told him he was lucky to have gotten away with the loss of only a few molars. I was glad I had not killed him. I took him back myself, in order to protect him against being misused. As I delivered him over to where the prisoners were being assembled, he pressed my hand and smiled.

CHAPTER XVI.

The next day we received orders to march to an unknown destination. We soon arrived at the depot of Aprement where we were obliged to wait. The depot had been destroyed. The next station was Chatel. Both of these places are about five kilometers behind the front.

The prisoners were assembled in Apremon. Several of them had come from that town. Their families were still in their homes and many prisoners asked permission to visit them. I had occasion to witness such a visit in Apremont. Two reserves led one of the prisoners to the house, which he had pointed out as his. The prisoner's young wife was in the kitchen with her three children. We followed them into the house.

The woman turned pale as she suddenly saw her husband. They embraced. We went outside for we felt out of place there.

The woman had not had a letter from her husband for five months because the Germans were between her and her husband's army. He had been in the trenches for a month, realizing how nearby his wife and children were, yet unable to reach them and with no way of knowing whether they were alive or dead.

How he must have felt as the French shells flew over his head on their way to Apremont!

There was no way of knowing whether the glow in the sky caused by the burning of a house was furnished by his home or not. Everything became a torturing uncertainty and all of life was a hell.

Home again for a few hours; then away, a prisoner! At least he would be able to get word to his wife by letter through the field posts.

Finally he said good-by. His wife had nothing to give him, no laundry, no food.

Everything had been lost and she lived on the soldiers' bounty. She gave him her last money and he refused to take it. She accepted the money back. It consisted of a few 5 and 10 pfennig pieces and some coppers, all she

This Village Had Changed Hands

More Than Fifteen Times.

Unable to endure this we took a collection among ourselves. We made up more than 10 marks, which we gave to the young woman. She refused it at first, then looking at her husband, she

When we refused to let her do this she ran to a store nearby and returned with cigars, tobacco, matches and sau-

She smiled perhaps for the first time

The children were with their father

With the greatest happiness the family walked along between the two armed soldiers. When the moment of

This was the fate of thousands of poor French and Belgian men and women, quartered near their homes

yet unable to know who was dead or

While we stood at the depot ten German soldiers arrived with fixed bayonets. Between them were three French citizens in civilian clothing, whom they escorted. All were elderly men. We asked an old Frenchman what this was

"We receive our food from the German military officials but it is not suf-ficient to live on. The people have nothing left. All stock and food had parting came all began to cry.

and they kissed him as he left. He had one child on each arm and his wife sage, which she gave to her husband.

in a long while.

carried the third.

about and he said:

alive.

took it and tried to kiss our hands.

a seized. Inese three men retused to work any longer for the German military officials because they could not live on what they received.

"They were arrested and are being sent to Germany. No one knows what their fate would be there. The men were being taken away by the Germans and interned in Germany."

We received orders to march to Varennes and left the next morning. As we reached the heights of Varennes about noon we saw the wide country before us and the city nestling in the valley. Farther up on the heights was Vauquois. Nothing could be seen of any houses but through our field glasses we could make out an enormous ash heap. Shells fell there continuously and we were frightened at the prospect of having to go to that spot. Scarcely had we crossed the heights when some shells burst behind us. The French artillery even singled out individuals. While Vauquois was in their possession they could co-ordinate the entire neighborhood. We understood now why this ash heap had been contested for so bitterly.

(Concluded Next Week.)

The cordial and courteous druggist, Mr. Williams, is always pleased to play you the latest records on the grafanola. Concerts are going on most the time.

Elsie Ferguson is one of the most powerful box-office attractions of the American theatre. She will be at the ISIS on Sunday evening, June 30, in "Barbary Sheep", a picturization of the famous novel of the same

Notice of Certain Street Improvement Bonds Will Be Taken Up.

Notice is hereby given that there ment and cancellation Bonds No. 8, 9, 10 and 11 bearing date July 1st, 1914.

said bonds will be taken up and and interest to said date and thereafter said bonds will cease to bear interest.

Dated and first published May 31, at Wigrich. W. S. KURRE. 1918. City Treasurer.

Wood Sawing Prices

Hereafter the following prices will e charged for cutting wood. Ash, Maple and Fur, one cut 60c. cuts 75c., 3 cuts $1; Slabs and Oak, cut 60c., 2 cuts 85c., 3 cuts $1; By the hour $2.

P. O. BLACK.

Max Goldman Deals in

HIDES PELTS WOOL FURS MOHAIR CASCARA BARK VEAL PORK BEEF POULTRY BUTTER EGGS FARM PRODUCE WOOD WOOD GROCERIES SHOES FURNISHINGS

CASH OR TRADE

DRY GOODS

SWOPE & SWOPE LAWYERS I. O. O. F. Building Independence, -Oregon

KINGS VALLEY

Mrs. Estalla Dodele, Mrs. H. C. Harter and Mrs. B. F. West went to Albany Saturday to attend the funeral of William Dodele, Several cars went from here Sunday to attend the funeral of William Dodele.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ayers and Mr. and Mrs. Andy Ayers were Corvallis

visitors Saturday. Mrs. J. P. Logan went to Inde-dependence Saturday. Miss Lillie Townsend wen t to Dallas Friday and had her tonsils removed Saturday. Mrs. Martha Christenson visited several days with Mr. and Mrs. Tip

Mr. and Mrs. John Senger arrived in the valley Thursday evening to visit at the home of their son, A. B. Senger, and returned to their home in Corvallis Friday.

The Red Cross gave an ice cream social at Hoskins Saturday evening.

Rev. Mumy of Salem preached at the church Sunday morning.

The missionary society will meet at the church Thursday afternoon.

Frank and Bruce Miller went to Albany Sunday to attend the funeral of their nephew, William Dodele,

WIGRICH ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Porterfield spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Porterfield.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Lichty and are sufficient funds in the street Misses Thelma and Alice Moe of paying fund of the City of Independ- Buena Vista were Sunday guests at ence, Oregon, to take up for pay- the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Chown.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Wilson and son, Alvin, and Mr. and Mrs. Adam That on July 1st, 1918, each of Grauer of Sheridan were Sunday cancelled and paid in full, principal guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L Chown.

Be sure and keep your eyes open for the date of the Red Cross social

Mr. and Mrs. Robert of Highland visited Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McComas.

WILLIAM S. KURRE PASSES; FUNERAL WELL ATTENDED (Continued from Page 1.)

tist church the following afternoon and the edifice was well filled with friends to pay their last respects to the departed. The services were held under the auspices of Homer Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of which the deceased was a loyal member. Dr. H. C. Dunsmore, as was requested by Mr. Kurre before, his death, spoke briefly to those assembled at such a sad occasion, and after two selections by the choir and a solo by Mrs. G. W. Conkey, the remains were taken to Portland and cremated, as the departed had also requested.

The father, Peter Kurre, was absent on a fishing trip at the time of his son's death and when he learned of it, made a terrific drive of many miles in his automobile to get home. He feels the loss of his son keenly.

William S. Kurre was born on a farm south of Independence in 1881 and was raised to manhood here where by his thrift and proficiency finally became cashier of the Independence National Bank. Before his advancement he was bookkeeper in the same institution for a number of years. He was also city treasurer at the time of his death. A few months ago he attempted to get into the service of his country but was rejected because of his weight. Will Kurre enjoyed the acquaintance and friendship of a large number of people and many besides his numerous relatives will mourn his death and miss him. He is survived by his father and four brothers, Claude of Cottage Grove, Frank of Portland, George of Dallas and Charles of Salem and one sister, Mrs. Nellie Titus of Washington.