BIG DEMAND AT BIG PRICES Raspberries and Loganberries

Raspberries. There will be an extensive acreage planted to strawberries this season and when they come into bearing, which will be in 1929, there will be a generous supply. It might be of general interest to learn that 50 percent of all the jellies, jams and preserves manufactured throughout the country are from strawberries; 33 from raspberries and the balance of 17 percent from loganberries, gooseberries, currants and kindred berries. What we desire to impress upon you is the importance and advisability of greatly increasing the production of raspberries and loganberries. In Oregon there are very few raspberries grown. In fact, the quantity is so small as to be hardly considered, and it will be many, many years before there will be sufficient supply to meet the requirements of the Oregon manufacturers. There can be but one solution and that is to plant more raspberries of the Cuthbert variety and when you stop for a moment and consider that we are willing to pay $190.00 per ton for raspberries now in bearing and $160.00 per ton for new plantings coming in to bearing in 1929 and $140.00 for 1921, and when planted on good soil and capable of producing from 3 to 5 tons per acre, it can readily be seen the profits which can be derived therefrom. We can supply you with plants at $6.00 per 1000, and now is the time to prepare your ground and plant them.

Loganberries. There is a constantly increasing demand for loganberries. These are finding an enlarged market, but there are not enough berries to go around. The market price today is $140.00 per ton for Loganberries in bearing, which is the highest price ever paid in Oregon. Manufacturers can absorb the product from an additional 2000 acres at a price which will leave a large profit to the grower. We can furnish you with plants at $15.00 per 1000 and in addition protect you with a long term contract. We want to create a demand for loganberries on a parity with strawberries and with your help we can bring it about. Our selling staff is prepared to put Oregon's product in every city of the United States and the world and all under Oregon brands. We are doing our share. We are willing to spend, and are spending thousands of dollars to advertise the products of the Willamette Valley and we need your active co-operation and we urge you to plant new acreage to raspberries and loganberries this spring.

We welcome your letters of inquiry and upon request will gladly mail you our booklet on "Berries and How to Grow Them."
