"Little Women" which comes to the Isis on Sunday night, May 4, makes as great a picture as it does a story. Millions of children have read the book with great delight and no adult has found it non-interesting. Every public library in the United States has the book on its shelves; it is considered essential in every school library and is used as a text book in many states. A clean, wholesome, elevating story, sprinkled with comedy, thrills and dramatic instances. "Little Women" was put on the screen in response to a universal demand and its first run in any theater draws a larger attendance than any other picture with few exceptions. No child should be deprived of seeing it; no parent should miss it. The picture could only be secured for the Isis for one night, Sunday May 4.
