Word has just been received from Shalor Eldridge that he has been honorably discharged from the navy. After a visit in several Eastern cities, he will visit relatives in Kansas, going from there to California where he will spend some time. Then he will join his many friends at home.

Lieutenant Gaylord Godfrey, recently returned from eastern training camps, has accepted a position with the McIntosh Grocery. He meets the public well and with his several years experience in the grocery business will be quite an addition to the already popular store. Mrs. Godfrey will join her husband here after a visit with relatives in Oregon City.

NEXT WEEK AT THE ISIS

Next week is Paramount-Artaft week, the opening of the season in the motion picture world. For the occasion it will be a week of wonderful entertainment beginning with Bill Hart in "Breed of Men" Sunday night.

A charming story and a highly interesting role has been provided for Lila Lee in "Rustling a Bride" which will be presented Monday night. In this production, Miss Lee plays the role of a typical Western girl who receives a letter from a cowboy, Nick McCredie, who has accidentally learned her name. Her grandmother dies, leaving her the farm, and she writes to Nick for advice and he suggests that she come out and marry him. The girl is delighted, packs up and leaves for Coyote Junction. But when Nick had first written her he had enclosed not his own picture but that of Pen Walton, one of his fellow cowboys, who is much handsomer than he. So when Nick meets her at the train he tells her Nick has sent him to meet her. This provokes interesting complications and a series of thrilling episodes.

Undeniably the foremost motion picture star in the affection of the American public, if not the world, Mary Pickford's talents and charm are universally recognized. There are no limitations to her exquisite artistry which unfolds like budding rose leaves in some new and more exquisite form with each successive character she portrays. It is sufficient to say that in "Captain Kidd, Jr." she has a role in which she displays her genius and charming personality more captivating than ever and that her vast army of admirers will be unanimous in their verdict that it ranks second to none in her gallery of famous screen portraits. On the speaking stage, "Captain Kidd, Jr." was one of the most popular ever produced. Mary plays the part of a canny little Scotch girl, who with "Captain Kidd, Jr.", hunted for hidden treasures. You certainly will be delighted with Mary Tuesday night.

Dorothy Dalton, as a screen star, is a constant source of pleasure to the public, for she combines all the arts and graces of poetry, literature, drama, painting or sculpture. She is skillful in her portrayals, sincere in her work and her beauty gains its full expression upon the silver screen—her charms delight the eye, even as her acting delights the heart. Miss Dalton is provided with a dramatic thunderbolt in "Extravaganza" which will be shown Wednesday night. The story casts Miss Dalton in exacting situations, which she meets with convincing naturalness. She is seen as the woman of vanity, gratifying her every desire for clothes and jewels—a being of innate selfishness who wrecks her husband, but is awakened to a realization of her error by a terrible dream. She is thruout a natural human being—a character that seems to step from the screen and live in flesh and blood. An extra attraction for the same night is a Flagg comedy, "Welcome Little Stranger." It is the adventures of a good looking young husband who brings home a very pretty young woman as a cook.

Charlie Ray in "Greased Lightning" comes Thursday night. Charlie plays the part of the village blacksmith in this picture, but unlike Mr. Longfellow's celebrated gentleman, he was a busy smithy and didn't stick around under the spreading chestnut tree. He invented "The Little Giant Potato Slicer." It blew up while he was exhibiting it in Pipersville, but it was some invention. Then Charlie traded "The Little Giant Potato Slicer" for a flivver made sometime before the flood. "Greased Lightning" he called it. It worked all right when it worked, but it had a terrible habit of stalling around. But one day, Charlie took every hill on high with that little old car of his. You'll want to see him in this. The picture is even faster than the title.

Ethel Clayton comes Friday evening in "Maggie Pepper," based upon the famous play by the late Charles Klein, who went down on the Lusitania. Rose Stahl appeared in the stage version of the play and made one of the greatest hits of her career in it. Maggie is a department store girl with more than the usual amount of difficulties. At the same time, however, she has more than the usual amount of pluck. Pepper is her last name and probably Ginger is her middle name. The acting of Ethel Clayton as Maggie is superb. She is perfect as the ill-used and hard working girl, yet charming in every mood. The picture, in short, is one to please and to thrill and best of all, it is a purely American, simple, human and whole some story of plain people under circumstances that are natural and yet presents a tense and compelling drama. As an extra for the evening, its Fatty Arbuckle in "Love." Fatty rides into this picture on an old fashioned bicycle and he falls off into—Love. There's a villain, too, who steals the girl. The village characters, the life on the old farm, love and laughter, and adventure galore, into which the husky but luckless swain falls at every turn, make this one of Arbuckle's most amusing pictures.

Bryant Washburn is recognized as one of the most popular leading men of the screen. Handsome, athletic, and filled with the spirit of youth, Mr. Washburn always impresses his audiences favorably and arouses within them the same enthusiasm for his work that he himself displays. In "Something To Do," Mr. Washburn plays one of his most delightful roles, that of a wealthy clubman with nothing to do but spend his time and money. But he wakes up suddenly and finds happiness in doing something for somebody else, breaking up a big swindling scheme and protecting a fellow clubman and his daughter from an outrageous fraud. Ann Little plays opposite Mr. Washburn, and it is of interest to know that
