TRIBUTES FROM THE WORLD'S LEADERS

Work of the American Red Cross Is Praised By Noted Men.

"It is on membership more than money contributions that the stress of the present campaign is laid, for the Red Cross seeks to associate the people in welfare work throughout the land, especially in those communities where neither official nor unofficial provision has been made for adequate health and social service."—President Wilson.

"The American Red Cross is the mobilized heart and spirit of the whole American people."—Henry P. Davison.

"A magnificent spirit breathes in the American Red Cross."—Marshal Foch.

In giving prompt and efficient relief the Red Cross has won the eternal gratitude of millions of people."—General Pershing.

"It requires no organization to allow one of us as an individual to buy a dinner for a hungry man. It requires the greatest degree of organization to deal with the foes of a world. The Red Cross seems to be essentially demanded. . . . Without the Red Cross I do not know whether the world would have been able to bear the horrors and devastation of this wearful war."—Newton B. Baker.

"The Red Cross is the great Neighbor. . . . If the world is made a little more comfortable, a little happier, a little stronger for the struggle of life through its effort, the Red Cross is content."—The Secretary of the Navy.

"The Red Cross is not going to turn its back on its responsibilities."—Livingston Farrand, Chairman, Executive Committee, National Red Cross.

"I don't know what we would have done without the help of the Americans. I thank you from the bottom of my heart."—Ignace Paderewski, Premier of Poland.

"Mr. Davison has spoken to me of how the Red Cross hopes to continue work even in peace time. This is a noble enterprise. . . . Wonderful results could be obtained if all countries would join hands, especially in all questions concerning small children, tuberculosis, and sanitation in general."—Queen Marie of Rumania.

"We surely can do no better than to emulate the human and social work of our sister organization, the American Red Cross."—Signor Ciralo, newly elected President of Italian Red Cross.

"Our heartiest thanks go out to our American friends."—Union des Femmes de France.

"The help given by the Red Cross is but another proof of the great heart and sympathy of the American people."—Prince Regent Alexander of Serbia.

"The Polish people look upon the American Red Cross as their salvation. It holds in its hands the destinies of nations. This world war has been fought in vain if there is no early restoration of normal physical and moral conditions in the newly born Republic of Poland. Poland is the keystone of the world's permanent peace."—Lieut. Col. Francis E. Franczak.

"I wish to express to the millions of Americans, who have made the work of the American Red Cross possible, the deep gratitude of my people."—The young King Alexander of Greece.

"I have confident hope that the American Red Cross' world-wide plans for charity and mercy will be largely realized, bringing the grateful appreciation of suffering millions as a partial recompense, and a greater reward, the richest blessings of God."—Cardinal Gibbons.

"One is honored by the privilege of membership in the Red Cross, and blessed in being permitted to make any kind of contribution to its work."—William Fraser McDowell, Presiding Bishop, Methodist Episcopal Church.

"The Red Cross is America at her best. . . . Money given to the Red Cross is not an investment, nor is it a charity. It is a sacrament."—Charles A. Eaton, Pastor Fifth Ave. Baptist Church, N. Y.

"It is extraordinary what can be accomplished when a free people all unite and work together for their common good and for the good of humanity."—Cardinal Mercier.

AT THE ISIS NEXT WEEK

The tenth and eleventh episodes of "The Lost Express" will be shown on Monday night. The added attraction is Gail Kane in "Love's Law." It is a wonderful story of a little slum girl with only one treasured possession—the fiddle left her by her father when he died. With this battered relic of an old Italian workshop she fiddles her way into the hearts of all who know her, but nearly meets disaster thru mixing heart throbs with art themes, but, by virtue of her childish innocence, saves a rich man from the wreck of his possessions and makes a gentleman of him.

Special matinee at 3:30 Tuesday Armistice Day. For the evening, Rupert Julian appears in "The Fire Flingers," a Saturday Evening Post story by William J. Niedig. The dramatic tale of the impersonation of a wealthy publisher by an convict, who is the cause of the former's death. Hatton, the convict, tries to go straight. He looks enough like the murdered man to be his double. The story deals with the relations between the impostor and his "wife", really the widow of the dead man. Tense situations pile up and merge into a tremendous climax.

Wednesday night, Bryant Washburn appears in "Putting It Over", a delightful comedy. He is a practical joker from a small town who goes to the big city to make his fortune and whose propensity to play practical jokes nearly cause him to lose not only his ten dollar a week position as soda clerk, but the love of a charming girl as well. This joke wakes him up to the responsibilities of the hour and he goes in with the big idea and wins. There is a Flagg comedy, "The Immovable Guest," on the same night. An old sea dog comes, uninvited, and sticks like a porous plaster.

Mary MacLaren in "The Unpainted Woman" ought to draw a good house Thursday night. The picture is full of heart throbbing, human interest and is the best in which Miss MacLaren has yet appeared. It a battle of a girl against the forces of society which demanded that once a "hired girl" she should always remain a "hired girl" and how she marries a worthless scion of a well-to-do family, loses him in a drunken brawl and then finds salvation with a farm of her own.

"The Rainbow Trail." The complete in itself, it is a continuation of "Riders of the Purple Sage." In the former novel, it will be remembered, John Lassiter, together with a woman, Jane Withersteen, and Fay Larkin, a child, had been pursued by enemies into the mountains. They hide in a valley which has only one entrance, and when Lassiter rolls a huge stone into this narrow crevice the three are locked up in valley. "The Rainbow Trail" opens three years later and is more interesting and thrilling than "Riders of the Purple Sage."

For Saturday afternoon and evening, E. K. Lincoln appears in "Lafayette, We Come!" Of this picture, its producers say: "It is one of the biggest and greatest mystery love dramas ever filmed. It made a Broadway 'show me' private audience stand up and cheer and tender it the greatest applause of any film ever show in New York. It gives a wonderful idea of the great work America has accomplished in France and shows what Pershing meant when he said, 'Lafayette We Come!'" In addition to this picture there is a Ford Weekly and a comedy.

On Sunday, Nov. 16, matinee and evening, D. W. Griffith presents one of the sweetest photo plays ever written, "True Heart Susie," a story of a Plain Girl.

Major Mills at Chautauqua

Major Thornton A. Mills, one of the principal lecturers of the Festival week, is of distinguished parentage. A son of the famous divine, Benjamin Fay Mills, he has inherited his father's remarkable platform ability and keen judgment of men and affairs. He has held important pastorates in the prominent churches of New York and the Middle West and was called to a prominent pulpit in Denver when Uncle Sam practically drafted his services, commissioned him Major and detailed him to important war work service in the Northwest.
