Their Appearance. "It is remarkable," philosophically said Old Codger, "that the man who does not know much of anything and knows that little all askew, usually assumes the tone and attitude of one who knows everything and is aware that when he departs this life wisdom will die with him. This appearance is most often found in horse doctors, grocery store sales and trifling sons-in-law, such as mine."—Country Gentlemen.

His Memory Always Sweet. On August 9, 1693, Izaak Walton, uncanonized patron saint of anglers, was born at Stafford, England. Although in his life Walton tasted much sorrow, losing his seven children and his wife, no author was the center of memories of such unmixt gentleness and peace. Charles Lamb said of him: "It might sweeten a man's temper at any time to read the 'Complete Angler'—a charming book still constantly reprinted and widely sold.

Hard Luck, Indeed.

Robert was decided in his refusal to go with his family to a dinner at his uncle's house. When pressed for a reason he said: "Well, it's mighty tough on a guy to have nothing to play with but girls and them all relations, at that."

Worse Than Egg Profiteers.

Client—"This bill of yours is exorbitant. There are several items in it that I don't understand at all." Lawyer—"I am perfectly willing to explain it, the explanation will cost you $10."—Boston Transcript.

New and Old Books.

In science, read, by preference, the newest works; in literature, the oldest. The classic literature is always modern. New books revive and redecorate old ideas; old books suggest and invigorate new ideas.—Bulwer Lytton.

Another Philippine Product.

The shrub from which the French manufacture the perfume known as cassie has been found growing abundantly in the Philippines.

Beyond Feeling.

Shirley's grandmother had been seriously ill for several days so I inquired of the tiny miss: "How is grandma feeling this morning?" With a solemn expression Shirley answered: "She isn't feelin' this mornin', she's dead."—Exchange.

At Lunch Time.

The struggle to make both ends meet often results in an empty middle.—Boston Transcript.

Peculiar Feeling.

Celia had been ill for many weeks. One day when she was stronger and had been put in a chair, she slipped down to the floor and stood for a moment on her feet. "Oh," she said in a much surprised voice, "I feel heavy to myself."

Might Be Worth It.

It is estimated that an expenditure of $10,000,000,000 would be required to equip the United States with all tillage tools necessary to bring its farms up to the highest possible production.

Rest the Eyes.

Look up every once in a while from your work and lay it down for a minute or two now and then, and let your interest focus on more distant things. Thus you will give the eyes a little rest by focussing in another position.

Silly Jamie.

The other day Jamie came running into the house crying at the top of his voice. He was followed by Jane, who explained by saying: "Mother, I'm 'shamed of Jamie—he's so unbrave, crying 'cause a little dog chased him."

Last Night's Dreams

—What They Mean

DID YOU DREAM OF LACK OF CLOTHING?

WHAT is called one of the "standard" dreams, one which is most annoying and one which everybody almost has experienced at least once in his life, some people many times, is the dream of finding oneself in a thronged street or in a room filled with people and suddenly realizing that one is only partially clothed or not clothed at all. In these dreams the people with whom we find ourselves do not appear to take any notice of our unconventional condition, but the dreamer is much disturbed and endeavors to escape. This dream has received particular attention from those scientists who for more than half a century have been investigating the phenomena of dreams regarded as purely mental (or more accurately psychic), or as physical manifestations. The dream in question is said to be the basis of Hans Christian Andersen's story, "The Emperor's New Clothes" and has been done into poetry by the German author, Fulda, in "The Tallsman." It is called by the scientists a "standard" or "typical" dream because it is one which is experienced by all persons in an identical or almost identical manner; whereas most of our dreams are peculiar to ourselves.

The empirics, those who interpret dreams in the old, superstitious, traditional mystic and unscientific manner—declare the dream under consideration to be a bad omen, though they do not all agree just how bad. They say it signifies that people are conspiring against you; that you are soon to receive an insult; you will be disappointed in your friends and relatives and it is a warning to you to mend your ways.

Those scientists who strive to account for dreams by referring them to a physical source say that this dream is simply the result of sensations caused by the bedclothes slipping off. But that does not hold for we frequently have the dream when covered up warm.

Professor Freud, the latest and the most celebrated of investigators of dream sources, says in his book, "The Interpretation of Dreams," that the dream is based upon a recollection of our earliest childhood. When we were babies we were seen with indifference by relatives, strangers and servants scantily dressed and were not ashamed. These recollections of babyhood, imprisoned dormant and unrecalled in our waking hours, are liberated to us in the dream state. Our feeling of uneasiness and desire to escape though no one notices our nudity, is a reflex from the "repression" of our later lives during which the habit of being properly clothed in public has become part of our normal existence.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

PHILOSOPHY.

It's all worth while, he used to say
When difficulties lined his way.
I've never known a trouble yet
I wasn't glad that I had met
The minute I had seen it through.
Because it proved what I could do.
I've feared it, looking straight ahead,
I've had my share of doubt and dread
And yet, when it was over, I
Looked backwards with a laughing eye
And to myself I'd always say:
You'll boast about that task some day.

I've never known a man so great
That didn't hunger to relate
The hardships and the cares he'd known
Before success was his to own.
The hunger that had made him white
Had also helped to make him fine.
The failures that had tried his soul
Had changed their bitterness for sweet
And now are memories to repeat.
Man's greatest joy beneath the sun
Is to recall what he has done.

Today I laugh at yesterday
And all the cares that came my way;
The past is only grim to those
Who left their courage with their woes.
Who plod along new joys to win
Looks back at trouble with a grin,
And boastfully at times repeats
The misery of his defeats.
He tells his hardships with a smile
And holds that they were all worth while.

For all the secret joys that last
Spring from the hardships of the past
So into every round of care
And every battle with despair
I plunge, remembering the fun
That it will mean when I am done—
That hurts me now will some day be
A very pleasant memory.
And laughingly I may recall
In future years the present fall.
What seems today a fearful test
May be tomorrow's source of jest,
And all that calls for courage stout,
Some day I'll proudly boast about.
