Food, Clothing and Other Necessaries Quoted Lower.

Chicago.-A wave of price-cutting in retail clothing costs reaching from the Mississippi valley to the Pacific coast was reported Wednesday. Dispatches from 24 cities told of promised reductions in certain necessities ranging from 15 per cent to minus profit.

Financial authorities here said that the indications were that the price decline would be limited to ready-to-wear clothing, principally women's garments and silks. Shoes were in the list affected.

Tight money and inadequate transportation facilities were cited among the prime reasons. Delays in delivery of goods in which much money had been tied up, together with inability With all but one small precinct in of farmers to get grain and livestock to market were said in many instances to have worked a hardship on mer-

> An officer of one of the leading lepartment stores of Chicago declared that the price reduction now being reported meant also that merchants were trying to satisfy what he called "a hysterical demand from the public for lower prices." These curent reductions, he said, might be only temporary.

A financial authority here said that if reports of price cutting were detoward a reduction in inventories. Though this might be temporary, he said, it was undoubtedly good, in that it suggested that merchants were gong ahead more cautiously. Sales are being held under various names.

LEONIDAS

EONIDAS was a Spartan hero who - earned a large bronze monument by holding the pass of Thermopylae with 300 men and a shoestring.

Sparta was a small, irritable country about the size of a Florida town site, but it was never stepped on with any success. The inhabitants lived on cavenne pepper and red beefsteak and practiced shooting at a mark eight hours a day. One time Xerxes, king of Persia, decided to annex Sparta, and after rounding up a neat little army of 2,000,000 men he headed for the Grecian archipelago, which was about in the same place it is now.

Xerxes did not get far before he ran into the pass of Thermopylae, which was a short cut between the mountains wide eough to allow two thin men to pass without being telescoped. Here Xerxes found Leonidas drawn up in battle array, defying the whole Persian army in some of the rudest Greek adjectives ever used.

Xerxes took the affair as a joke until Leonidas had spitted a few thousand Persian husbands on his trusty sword, when he decided to surround Leonidas. When the Spartan hero discovered this, he delivered an eloquent address to his men and charged the entire Persian army, which filled him so full of arrows that he had to be pin-feathered before being removed to the family residence.

Leonidas' name at once became a household word, and autographs and kodak pictures of the deceased were eagerly sought after. His death aroused so much indignation that the Spartans rose up and threw Xerxes across the Hellespont with chagrin written all over his profile. Leonidas did not die in vain, as he had furnished the impassioned high school graduate with some of the most livid eloquence and weird rhetoric ever uncorked from an opera house stage.
