The doctors at McMinnville and Salem where he was in a sanatorium, pronounced his case tuberculosis and hopeless. Young Ward's parents did not despair but kept on hoping and struggling for relief for their son when finally by aid of nerve treatment, on his 19th birthday he told his father he was able to walk around the room and to almost stage a boxing match. He has so far regained use of his arm, which has almost been paralyzed, that he is able to shave himself. The young man has been visiting in Independence and Woodburn.
