FARM CHIMNEYS NEED STUDY

They Should Start From Ground and Not Be Placed on Brackets-Make Foundation Solid.

All chimneys for farm building should start from the ground. Those placed on brackets are unsafe and often increase the rate of insurance In a properly designed house of mod erate size, one or at most two chimneys, each containing several flues, will serve every purpose. If possible a flue should be provided for each by obtained, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture

The chimney should have a solid foundation of brick or stone, and if of brick, of course, an extra footing should be laid. The exterior walls should be two bricks thick and the division walls one brick thick. In case the chimney is lined with one of the patent fire-clay linings now on the market one brick will prove of sufficient thickness for the exterior walls.

In case it is necessary to carry a stovepipe any considerable distance inside a partition to reach the chimney, a terra cotta thimble should be used, and where a pipe passes completely through a partition it should be protected with a ventilated thim-

DON'T TAKE JOB SERIOUSLY

Postmasters Refuse to Answer Department Correspondence and Threaten to Quit When Called to Task by Officials.

Washington .- Some of the trials of the Post Office department with many of the fourth class postmasters of the country, who refuse to answer officia! correspondence, and who otherwise conduct themselves in a perhaps too high-handed fashion, are revealed by W. Irving Glover, third assistant postmaster general.

Those fourth class postmasters, it appears, have been in part responsible for the delay in adjusting the 50,000 claims for lost and damaged parcels. er they held their jobs or not

Care Little About Jobs. The trouble is that they really do not, Glover intimated, and they often tell the department officials as much in just about that many words. They are under civil service, and often they are the only men in their towns who often they run small stores, and if the department in Washington gets "all het up" over their fallure to answer correspondence, the postmasters threaten to give up the post office

That threat usually "works," for it is better to have some sort of post office than none at all.

"Why, some of them pay no attention to us at all," said Glover, with a smile of despair. "One of them recently was asked to fill out a questionnaire showing reasons as to this and that in connection with a lost parcel. "'Hell, no; hell, yes; hell, no; hell, yes,' was the way he sent the questionnaire back to us," continued Glover, with some feeling. "Then, he continued, 'If you don't like it, take post office out of my

"This is a sample of the thing we have to put up with," continued the third assistant postmaster general.

"One postmaster actually tere out the partitions used to mark off the post office from the rest of his store and threw them out into the street. together with all the postal appa-

"Do you have to put up with that Many Requests Unanswered. "There is not much else we can do. sometimes," he said. "Often it becomes a case of having a postmaster like that or none at all. Often they pay no attention whatever to letters asking for information, and some of them even refuse to send back to mercantile houses packages refused by customers in their villages.

"For instance, a man asks for samples of suitings from some big mercantile house, that is, perhaps, not as strict in its business ethics as some of the houses.

"A sample of a blue cloth, and sample of a brown cloth are sent him. from which he selects the blue, and orders a suit of that color. But the clothing house sends him suits made from both colored cloths.

"The customer accepts the blue sult, but refuses the brown one. And the postmaster does not take the trouble either to notify the mercantile house or send the suit back. Then when the house kicks, and begins to flood the customer with letters asking for a remittance for the brown sult. too, the customer tears up the letters and the postmaster pays no attention to letters to him."

Glover said that the department had been able to clear up the 50,000 delayed cases partly because it had valved the old rules requiring many affidavits as to the cost of articles alleged to be lost.
