Memoirs of Napoleon

The personal reminiscences of Baron de Meneval, for thirteen years private secretary to Napoleon Bonaparte, bring out, as no history can, many enlightening and interesting side lights on the character of that greatest of lenders. De Méneval's descriptions have the piquancy and interest possible only because he was an actual eyewitness of the scents and incidents of which he writes. Their reliability and historical interest can be judged by the fact that the very conservative French Academy publicly recommends them.

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR READERS By special arrangement with the publishers of Collier's, The National Weekly, we are shin to give these valuable and interesting Memoirs free with a year's subscription to Collier's and this publication, at a price less than the lowest net cash subscription price of the two papers. Only a limited quantity of these Memoirs is available, however, so to get the benefit of this special offer you must act oncells.

WOOED WITHOUT HER KNOWLEDGE

Strange Courtship That Terminated Happily.

My father and mother died within a few months of each other, and I, a girl of twenty, went to live with an aunt. I had not been educated to fill any position, and, my father having left me nothing, the outlook was distressing. I made up my mind to go to work at something in which no preparation was needed, but my aunt was unwilling. One day she came to me with a letter, which she read to me. It was from Ethan Andrews, a civil engineer, who had gone to Brazil to take a posi tion on a railroad that was then being built and had determined to make the country his home. He was evidently a practical (I called it brutal) sort of a Attorney M. N. McFadden of fellow, without a spark of romance in day. him, for he asked my aunt to select a wife for him and send her to him just as he would commission her to buy a the article purchased. The case on Ethan Andrews' part, I have since learned, was not so bad as it appeared. My aunt had written him about me with a view to making a match and had sent him my pictore, but she said nothing to me about this leaving me to decide, as it were, in cold blood. The letter she had shown me was his reply. They had their own reasons for this course.

At first I rebelled, but at last in a fit of desperation consented, taking the leap as a hunted doe will jump from a friends at Albany and Corvallis cliff. I asked no questions as to the traits of the man into whose arms I was about to east myself nor to see his likeness. I was taken to the steamer as a lamb led to the slaughter. The steamer touched at Havana.

When we steamed out of the barbor a gentleman began to tramp back and forth, apparently for exercise, near where I was sitting. Presently he noticed my forlorn appearance and gave me an involuntary look of sympathy. Then he went below, I infer-Miss Facklam, one of the red, to get rid of so lugubrious a sight as myself, but he soon reappeared with a bundle of magazines and deferentially offered them to me. This was the beginning of an acquaintance that in few days ripened into friendship. Though be delicately refrained from asking me the cause of my gloom, I longed to tell some one and confided it

> "Poor child," he said, a world of sympathy in his voice, his manner, and especially in his kindly brown eyes. "Do you wonder," I asked "that I am the quintessence of misery?" "I do not. At the same time I can understand the motives of the man who has sent for you. Doubtless he missed the companionship of his own countrymen, especially of his country women, and, remembering that love is blind' and 'marriage is a lottery, oncluded to rely upon your nunt's selection, especially since he could not you are to wed has the unrefined instincts you infer."

"And what do you think of my action He made no reply for some time. He was pondering.

"You have evidently found it easier," "My besitation is rather that you require a woman instead of a man to in his place' is in this case impracticable. No man can put himself in a woman's place."

"You can at least judge whether I have acted wisely or not."

"Under duress you have made a decision involving a risk, but who shall say whether your circumstances justifled the risk or whether it is a greater one than if you find selected your life partner after a study of him during a courtship in which you were blinded by love and in which each participant studies to conceal every defect?"
