

THE MARKET GARDENER IS HONEST WITH THE GOOD JUDGE

MAN the taste of "Right-Cut" is so satisfying and so lasting that a ten-cent pouch of the Real Tobacco Chew lasts you twice as long as the same money will buy in your old kind.

Why, the only thing about "Right-Cut" that isn't a luxury is the price.

You'll be glad of the day you start with the Real Tobacco Chew if you are critical about the tobacco you chew.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

If a real chew, cut fine and short, that you can't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary tinned tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the ads bring out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

The white man, Jess Willard, has the thanks of the American people for his work on Monday of this week when he landed on the jaw of the black beast and by one well directed blow removed the obnoxious character from "public life." Defeated, Johnson's power and glory are gone and when his money is gone also, he will fall back into the gutter from whence he came. As a climax to end of the beast, it is a pity that the government cannot get him behind the bars where he belongs. It would serve as a red flag of warning to other "niggers" of his kind and perhaps prevent a repetition of the blot that Johnson's flurry has caused.

General dislike for America doesn't prevent the other nations from coming around at feeding time.—Washington Post.

The New York Health Commissioner reports that germs in clothing are not killed in the laundry process, which shows that a geron has more vitality than a shirt.—Boston Transcript.

We must really be more careful in the future. Every time we protest against something Great Britain is about to do, Great Britain cites an American precedent for doing it.—Chicago Herald.

LOGANBERRY JUICE

Some of the loganberry juice was put on board the war ship in San Francisco harbor this winter and Mr. Breck was anxious for further trade along this line.

All in all his success with the loganberry juice in official Washington encouraged Mr. Breck to predict that loganberry juice, as long as the quality held up to the standard of the product put out by the Salem Fruit Union, would eclipse grape juice as the national drink. He even predicts that when the pleasing beverage tickles the palates of a few more foreign diplomats at some of Mr. Bryan's official dinners that the time will not be far distant when the Russian will forget his vodka, the Frenchman his absinthe, and the Englishman will mix his "alf and 'alf" out of equal parts of loganberry juice and water with a dash of lemon and sweetened to taste.

The Salem Fruit Union was the pioneer in the loganberry juice industry in this country. When the price of the dried fruit began to drop off and the green berries found a slow sale it became necessary to put them on the market in some other form. The idea of extracting the juice from the berry then came to the front and, in spite of the competition of grape juice, can be made to pay in commercial quantities. The principal expense of producing dividends from loganberry juice is the great expense in marketing the product. The local demand is soon satisfied and in new fields the salesman finds he must create a demand before he can find a sale for his product. Again the green loganberries cost about three times as much as the raw product for grape juice and though the loganberry juice will stand more than three times as much adulteration for table use or a beverage the people of other lands are slow to see this point.

The sale of the dried product is going well in the east at present according to the report of Assistant Manager Robert Paulus, of the Salem Fruit Union. In one large city in the east a campaign of advertising has brought in hundreds of responses. Each day among the want ad columns of one of the principal dailies of the city is printed the names and addresses of 15 women subscribers. When her name appears the housewife may call at the paper and there she is given an order for 25 cents worth of Forrest Brand Loganberries at her regular grocers. Of course when the grocer begins to hear these orders he begins to order some loganberries from the local broker and the trade goes merrily on. The Forrest Brand put up and packed by the Salem Fruit Union is prepared by a special process for the finest trade and once the customer finds out the quality of the berry he is always a customer.

Inferior grades of fruit flood the market at times and the salesmen are forced to invade new fields but the local packing plant has every reason to trust to the excellence of its output to assure the future for the product. Return orders are coming in with more frequency and the loganberry growers are convinced that it requires time only for the people in other states to purge their taste of highly colored and highly seasoned, artificial products to become boosters for the luscious berry grown in the Willamette valley fields.—Salem Capital Journal.

too much in one. He—You do not seem to be so any more for it that now. She—How can he? Didn't I marry you?—Baltimore American.
