THE SOCIAL WORLD

BY VIRGINIA SOUTHERN

"Oh the joys we have in summer,
When the birds are singing gay,
And the balmy breeze is coming,
And we've flowers on the way;
Nature really seems rejoicing;
And her ways are always fair:
In the rain and sun's a blessing;
Things are growing everywhere."

An electrified patriotic current which has been sweeping the West touched Independence last Thursday and drew nearly all of its inhabitants to Salem in the afternoon. The historic old Liberty Bell was the magnet and the crowd incidentally too was eager to catch a glimpse of De Kor, the "maniac of the air" who looped the loop and performed other breath taking aerial feats.

Those who had seen the Old Liberty Bell before noticed that rivets had been added to protect the "crack" from additional enlargement and those who gazed upon it for the first time were surprised that it was not substantially encased in glass to protect it from the varied altitudes through which it must travel, but to all alike it revived the daring deeds of our ancestors which the old relic tho' marred impressively represents.

So far, this week seems to hold practically nothing of social interest except a few very informal affairs.

"STILL LITERARY"

A purely literary organization which is delving for knowledge without cessation during the Summer enjoyed a most delightful session with Mrs. W. H. Walker on Wednesday afternoon of last week at her handsome new home on Fifth street.

WELCOME RECEPTIONS

The receptions held at the Methodist and Baptist Church parlors were delightfully informal and enjoyable and proved pleasant welcoming functions for the new members who have recently united with these two churches.

MISS DENNISON MARRIES

The following excerpt from Sunday's Salem Statesman will prove interesting to a concourse of friends, Miss Dennison once having taught in the Independence schools:

At a lovely home wedding, Miss Inez Mae Dennison became the bride of John H. Suttle of Portland, Wednesday night at home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dennison, 220 North Liberty street, Rev. Harry E. Marshall officiating.

She was attractive in a handsome gown of heavy white satin, silk lace and chiffon, embellished with silk lace and pearl ornaments. Her long veil was caught with lilies of the valley and a silver embroidered band. Her only jewel was a pearl lavalier, the bridegroom's gift. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. She was attended by Miss Marie Bennett as bridesmaid, who wore an attractive gown of pink satin, with an overdrape of pink chiffon, and carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations. Her ornament was a gold brooch, the bride's gift. The bridal party was preceded to an improvised altar by small Beverly Wygant, frocked in pink, who scattered rose petals along the aisle. Mr. and Mrs. Suttle will be at home after August first at 1247 East Morrison street, Portland.

"STAG" PARTY

Mrs. Bascue and Mrs. McCall were hostesses Saturday evening at a stag party at the McCall apartments.

There were no men present, however, but the feminine contingent came clothed in masculine attire, causing much merriment and a rousing, jolly good time followed.

ment and a rousing, jolly good time followed.

SLUMBER PARTY

Miss Eloise Davis entertained with a Slumber party last Tuesday night, complimenting Miss Freda Campbell, both the hostess and honor guest realizing the delightful experience of being "sweet sixteen."

The bunch was radiant with merriment and indulged in everything but slumber.

AL FRESCO PARTY

The Misses Bramberg entertained the members of a recently formed club, consisting of the younger set of the Baptist church, Tuesday evening.

The affair was delightfully al-fresco, many mirth provoking games lending diversion before the attractive hostesses served delicious refreshments.

IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY

Patrick to a chair the cottage door burst open with a bang, startling the assemblage. Almost breathless, eyes staring and wailing a newspaper in his hand, there was Snapper Kelly, a nearby farmer.

"War! War! War!" he cried, and thrust the paper under the eyes of his appalled neighbors. There in display headlines was the following:

"LONDON DISPATCHES STATE THAT GERMANY HAS DECLARED WAR ON ENGLAND, FRANCE AND RUSSIA! RECRUITS WANTED AT ONCE!"

"Great heavens!" ejaculated Molly. "We're at war at home and at war abroad. What are things coming to? Is the world coming to an end?"

Both Maloney and Rooney stood silent for a moment, studying the headlines. Molly covered into a corner clasping her hands nervously. This was a situation for the men folks alone to handle. Finally Rooney, with a grave countenance, answered the old man.

"No, it's not the end of the world," he said in low tones, "but it's the end of my fighting against home rule—until the Germans are defeated. My rifle will not be pointed against Irishmen now, but against the enemies of the empire. Sure, I'm going to join the army at once."

Maloney threw back his head resolutely. "Sure I'm for the same thing," he said. "I guess home rule can wait awhile for all of us."

As Molly's father heard the statements of the two young men he sighed disappointedly and glanced from one to the other.

"I'm sorry I'm too old to go myself," he finally said. "I know the country needs all the men it can get." Then he stared fixedly at Rooney. "But as for you, I hope you go to war and never come back. I don't want you ever to come into my house again."

He turned away from Rooney and stormed out of the room.

The parting between Molly and Patrick was a most affecting one. The girl broke down utterly at the thought

"DO NOT GO," SHE PLEADED, of her loved one exposing himself to the dangers of the greatest war of all time. "Do not go," she pleaded. "But I'll write to you, my bonny colleen," he reassured her, "and let you know that I'm all right." (continued on page 4)

PROTECTING THE STOCK

Careful dairymen are paying greater attention each year to the little savings hitherto unthought of in the way of stock. Particularly is this true in protecting the herd from the annoyances which have hitherto been regarded as altogether in the course of nature. Barking dogs are being less and less permitted upon the premises, still less to chase in the cows. The necessity of pure drinking water is appreciated as never before, and above and beyond all else, the loss in milk production, flesh, time and temper, incident to the irritation of winged pests, flies, gnats and mosquitoes, is being combated as never in the past.

There are the market today, reliable preparations which act as absolute fly repellents, used externally, harmless yet wonderfully effective. Applied with a sprayer or with a soft cloth, sponge or brush, to the exposed surface of the cattle daily, they furnish instant and complete relief. No dairyman can afford during the fly season, to be without a supply. Their use will spell dividends many, many times in excess of the slight initial cost. The Government is now issuing bulletins advocating the use of fly repellents.
