SELLING SILOS
The Spaulding Logging company is now placing their Indiana silo not only in the country around Salem, but in all parts of the coast. Yesterday, they received an order for three silos, to be shipped to farmers living near Jefferson. This company has the exclusive sale and manufacture on the Pacific coast of the Indiana silo and already have 20 agents out working in these states. The Indiana silo has several points that appeal to the average farmer. One of these is the construction of the door frame and another is the ease with which the silo can be set up.—Salem Capital Journal.

IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY
"I see, I see, I see, I see you again," she sobbed, casting her arms around his neck. "I see—I see a great black shadow coming between us, I—I want to go with you to be near you. I could go as a nurse."
Patrick finally succeeded in quieting her and bade her farewell.
Maloney overtook him on the roadway. "You and I will probably be in the same regiment, Paddy Rooney," he said sneeringly. "But before we go I'm going to give you a good licking."
He advanced menacingly on Rooney. The latter eluded him, and while the rivals exchanged vicious blows a frightened figure came fluttering to ward them, her black hair streaming in the wind.
"Stop it; stop it," she cried, and Molly rushed between them. The men separated, and Molly fell fainting into Patrick's arms.
