There Was a Footprint.
A dentist had a patient with whom he had for years a friendly as well as a professional association, and when the patient called in to have a tooth extracted he was cordially received.

"Will you give us a song?" the dentist suggested.
The patient instead gave a dramatic description of his recent dental pain and ended with an impassioned plea for instant extraction of the offending tooth.
"No, no," said the dentist. "You're run down, my boy! Go and walk in the park for an hour."
"Won't do me any good," pleaded the sufferer, but the dentist insisted, and round the park the obedient patient went. When he came back he was duly anesthetized, and the deed was done. When he was leaving he shook the hand that had cured him and asked: "Why on earth did you send me walking round the park?"
"You were run down and nervous," the dentist replied. Then he added, with a grin, "Besides, I'd no gas when you came!"

A Submarine Water Supply.

In the Persian gulf, about twenty miles from the Arabian coast, is a group of islands the largest of which is called Bahrein. This island, which is twenty miles in length and ten in width, is low and sandy in most places, but here and there an oasis rich in date palms dots the island with spots of green. "The Mountain of the Mist," by the center, rises to the height of 400 feet. The 8,000 people who live in Manamah, its largest town, are mostly Arabs of the fanatical Wahabi sect. Fish and seaweed are their chief food, and the only fresh water they have to drink is brought from springs at the bottom of the sea. The natives, with goat-like legs, dive to the bottom and, holding the openings down upon the bubbling spring, swim to the surface with their lungs filled with sweet water. The extensive pearl fisheries, for which the islands have always been famous, is their one great industry.—Christian Herald.

Peasery of Ed Walsh.
Note the difference between Pitchers Eddie Plank and Ed Walsh. Plank is far below Walsh in physique and stamina. His pitching lacked the ease of the Big Red, but Plank was more of a warrior. He knew about what he could stand, and from twenty-five to thirty games a year was his limit, while Walsh has worked from thirty to sixty five. The answer is Ed Walsh is a star in fact—me and Walsh through at thirty-four.

SUFFER AT BORDER

Heat Is Hard For Unacclimated Guardsmen.
MANY DISCOMFORTS AHEAD.

But There is a Wide Variety of Scenery and Much to Interest the Volunteers Who Are Doing Patrol Duty. Lower Part of Border Will Fascinate the Recruits.

San Antonio, Tex.—Campaigning upon the Mexican border is no pleasant picnic in these hot summer days for the thousands of unacclimated men from the northern states. Notwithstanding the many discomforts that will be encountered by the raw and unseasoned military men they will find portions of the frontier region full of fascinating interest. This is particularly true of that part of the border which extends from the mouth of the Rio Grande along the course of that stream for more than 100 miles. When the upper reaches of the Rio Grande begin to break into a rough, barren, monotonous country that runs westward all the way to the Pacific ocean the wild beauty and striking strangeness that characterize the lower border begin to wane.

There is a marked difference in the summer climate of the various points along the border, due to the varying altitude and the nearness of the ocean.

SOLDIER'S IMPROVED HUT TO PROTECT HIM FROM HEAT.

Many people would suppose that Brownsville, situated far down toward the tropics and within twenty-five miles of the mouth of the Rio Grande, would be a veritable inferno during the hot weather months. Just the contrary is true. The climate there in summer is delightful. The ever blowing trade winds sweep inward from the gulf of Mexico, tempering the heat of the sun. The effect of the gulf "breeze" is felt along the Rio Grande for more than 200 miles.

The towns and military stations of Harlingen, Mercedes, Donna, Mission, McAllen, Sanford, Hidalgo, San Benito, Edinburg, Rio Grande City, Roma, Zapata, Laredo, Fort Brown, Fort Ringgold and Fort McIntosh are all within the zone that is tempered by the constantly blowing breeze from the gulf. From Laredo all the way west to the Pacific ocean the summer temperature varies in intensity. The breeze that usually blows from the mountains of the states of Coahuila and Tamaulipas has a cooling effect upon the climate of the border from Laredo to the edge of the Big Bend country, taking in the towns of Eagle Pass and Del Rio.

If there is anything that the soldier from other states fervently hopes for above others it is that he be kept out of the Big Bend region. From now on until November an almost steady temperature ranging from 110 to 120 in the shade can be counted on. There is not a tree or shrub to break the terrific rays of the sun.

Most of the larger cities of Mexico are well situated at altitudes ranging from 3,000 to 7,000 feet. Saltillo, Durango, Zacatecas, Aguas Calientes, San Luis Potosi, Puebla, Pachuca, City of Mexico, Guadalajara, Oaxaca, Morelia and many other cities and towns have delightful summer climates, while the temperature in winter is mild and pleasant. The climate of Monterey and Torreon is hot, but not oppressively so. The gulf coast cities of Tampico, Vera Cruz, Coahuila, Tuxpan and Progreso are refreshed by cooling breezes. The same is true of the Pacific coast cities of Guaymas, Mazatlan, Mazatlan, Arapacito and Salina Cruz.

The climate of the border towns of Columbus, N. M.; Douglas, Neco and Nogales, Ariz., is not as unbearable in summer as one who has not gone through a living experience upon that part of the border might suppose. The nights are usually pleasant and the days are relieved by a breeze from the mountains. The region, however, is desolate and uninviting.

It is the mystery of the chaparral covered region of the lower Rio Grande border that appeals most to the average visitor to the frontier. Upon both sides of the international boundary stream the low growing mesquite trees, cut claws, prickly pear and invulnerable other varieties of thorny shrubs and plants form an almost impenetrable wilderness.

HOW THE ICE WAS BROKEN

By ALAN HINSDALE

I had seen hundreds, thousands of young women, but until I saw a certain lady on a steamer on my way from New York to Naples I had not seen the one to absorb me. I would have given much for an introduction, but there was no one to introduce me. As soon as we reached port I made a detective of myself in order to learn where she was going, with a view to following her. She was traveling with an elderly lady and a girl of twelve. The lady I presumed to be her mother, the girl her sister. On reaching Naples I was obliged to lose sight of the family, but went the rounds of the hotels until I found them. Then, too, I had the good fortune to be on the same train with them on a trip to Pompeii.

Usually Americans traveling abroad make one another's acquaintance with out formality, but in this case nothing occurred to warrant my opening conversation with them. The older woman seemed to be very offish, the girl retiring, and I was fearful of intruding. So there we were—I wishing to be on social terms with the girl, she doubtless wishing for the companionship of a young man, but kept apart by conventions.

When they had left Naples I learned from the clerk of the hotel where they had stopped that they had expressed their trunks to a certain hotel in Rome. A day or two later I went to Rome and put up at that same hotel. The morning after my arrival I breakfasted in the same dining room with them, but they did not appear to notice me, and I refrained from looking their way when they were looking mine.

Their next stopping place was Florence, and, having learned that it was their policy to express their trunks, I did not find it difficult to trace them. But this time an overconscientiousness of guilt sent me to a different hotel. Florence is contracted, and I was sure to meet them in the picture galleries. And so I did. The mother passed me with a high head, but the girl I admired showed signs of consciousness.

And so I dogged the footsteps of these persons till I cornered them in an inn in Switzerland so small that our rooms were very near together. Each one of their party had a sleeping room. At the end of the hall was the mother's; opposite was the older daughter's; next to the mother was the little girl's, and next to the little girl was my apartment.

In the middle of the night I was awakened by a soft hand laid on my forehead.

"Feel better, dearie?"
The voice was feminine, and, since I had heard it before, I knew it to be that of my charmer. Realizing that my masculine tones would not be mistaken for a child's, I simply made no reply. The girl took my hand, and I knew that she was surprised at its size, for she evidently became agitated. Indeed, she must have become conscious that she had made a mistake, for without a word she hastily left the room.

The next morning while dressing I noticed on the floor a little gold pin of the safety kind. Picking it up, I put it in my portmanteau. I knew very well that my visitor of the night before had dropped it. I knew also that it was my bounden duty to return her property, though it was of very little value, but at the same time that to return it would be embarrassing to her. I therefore took no action in the matter.

It was evident in the morning that the little girl was indisposed, for she was not in the breakfast room with her mother and sister. It was also evident from that sister's appearance that she was much embarrassed by a consciousness of having the night before got into the wrong room. I knew that if I returned what she had dropped I would make a mistake. I thought over various methods of returning it that might not appear indelicate, but none of them satisfied me. Besides, I wished to keep it for a souvenir.

I wondered if the girl was not in some such position as I. Did she not wish to apologize for her intrusion, and was she not prevented by delicacy?

I am ashamed to confess that it was she who solved the problem between us. One morning she came out of her room at the same time that I came out of mine. She paused, hesitated, then said to me:
"I owe you an explanation. The other—"
"Don't give yourself any concern as to that," I said. "I understood at once you had made a mistake. In the morning I found a pin on the floor that you had dropped."

I took the article from my pocket and handed it to her. She received it, smiled, half poutingly, half amusedly, and went her way.

But the ice was broken. The next time she met me in the hotel she nodded to me and I dropped a passing remark. Before very long I was hand and glove with the party and attending to the thousand and one things in which a man is useful to women, especially when they are traveling abroad. It is perhaps not necessary to add that I improved the time and before any of us returned to America I had achieved an engagement conditional upon my credentials being satisfactory. They were found to be so, and now when we two travel abroad we go together. One of our favorite tours is over the route we traveled when we were angling for an acquaintance.

WHY THE BEST OF CHEWS IS "SPEAR HEAD"

Its Rich, Sweet, Mellow Flavor Has Been Famous for a Generation

MADE OF CHOICEST RED BURLEY

The secret of tobacco satisfaction is known only to the man who chews Spears tobacco. The reason is that a good chew gets right next to your taste, while the leaf in Spears tobacco is in a state of fresh, juicy richness that is not possible in any other form of tobacco.

There's no tobacco in the world that can give you the hearty, wholesome flavor that you get from a delicious chew of Spear Head.

Spear Head is made exclusively of ripe, red Kentucky Burley—the most richly-flavored chewing tobacco that grows. Still more, only the very choicest red Burley leaf is used for Spear Head.

This choice leaf is selected with the most painstaking care, is stemmed by hand, is thoroughly washed free of all foreign matter, and is pressed into Spear Head plugs so slowly that not a drop of juice or an atom of the natural flavor escapes.

Try Spear Head, and you'll get a sweet, mellow, luscious, satisfying chew that cannot be obtained in any other tobacco. In 10c cuts, wrapped in wax paper.
