A representative of the railroad company showed up at the Bowers settlement on railroad grant lands on Jenny creek last Friday and found quite a number of settlers camping and preparing to erect cabins. He informed them that if they put up cabins the company would eject them. Benton Bowers was in Ashland on business at the time and did not meet the representative of the company. He left for Jenny creek Monday and a number of cabins will be under construction this week. Mr. Bowers was anxious to meet any authorized representative of the company on the scene and he is prepared to perform in his presence any act necessary to make actual residence, such as erecting a cabin, or the cutting down of growing trees, or any other legitimate act that the company wishes to forbid him to do.—Valley Record.

Henry Pernoll, the Applegate baseball twirler, was given a try-out at Portland Wednesday, and that he made good is evidenced by the following paragraph from the Oregonian:—"Pernoll, the new twirler, a brush leaguer from Grant's Pass, is responsible for it all. Yesterday afternoon he put the Indian sign on the Angel band, and when the matinee was over, the score board was decorated with three tallies for the Beavers and a single mark for the Berry boys. But Manager Mac did not allow the short boy to finish his game and at the end of the sixth inning put "Cholly" Hartman in the box. But Pernoll had the game won, and won in good shape, too. A few more such games, and "Shorty" will have a home for keeps in the Rose City."
