The New School Law.

In view of the fact that school will open on Sept. 16, the new educational law might be of interest. Oregon now has the strictest compulsory educational law of any state in the Union, and as the punishment is very strict for violation of the law, there will no doubt be a larger percentage of pupils for Oregon this year than ever before.

The following are requirements of the law:

"All children between the ages of 9 and 14 years must go to public school all the term. The children from 14 to 16 must either work or go to school. The exception to these requirements are children in private schools, pupils physically unable to attend, pupils under 10 living more than one and one-half miles from schools, pupils of any age living more than three miles from school and pupils under private tutors at home. The steps for the enforcement of the law are as follows:

1. Appointment of truant officers in each district.
2. First-class districts have power to call on police.
3. County Superintendent furnishes officers with a list of teachers.
4. Teacher compares record with census each month.
5. Teacher reports delinquents to secretary of boundary board.
6. Secretary reports to truant office.
7. Officer notifies parents and teachers.
8. Officer make complaint to Justice of Peace.
9. Justice issues warrant and conducts trial. The punishment for truancy is a fine of from $5 to $20 or imprisonment of from two to 10 days and all officers, including the School Superintendent and teachers, may be fined from $5 to $20 for failure to perform the duties incumbent on them under the act."
