C. W. Conklin, sexton of the Jacksonville cemetery, complains that his tools at the graveyard are used by people visiting there and are sometimes left wherever they happen to be using them; lumber that is used for various purposes has been destroyed. He says that if such keeps up he will be necessitated to lock the tools and lumber in the tool house, which will be a great inconvenience to the visitors. It would be just as easy for users of these tools to take care of them and return them, and unless they do so, they will have to bring their own.
