VISIT TO THE CYANIDE PLANT

To those who are unfamiliar with the process of cyaniding for gold this plant may be of some interest.

On approaching the works one will see a succession of large tanks or vats. The first two tanks contain the cyanide solution, and are known as cyanide vats. Near these tanks are four tanks called leaching tanks in which the sand is first pumped, each holding about 100 tons. Lime is put in these tanks to cut the foreign matter. The sand is then pumped into four settling tanks. These tanks are fitted with conical bottoms so that the gold will collect in a small place at the bottom. The surplus mud is separated from the gold bearing sand, and the gold-bearing sand is pumped into two agitating vats. These vats also have conical bottoms and a draft of air is forced through the bottom of these vats which causes the sand to move around in the tank to separate it from the gold. The cyanide reduces the gold to almost a liquid. Two large rotary filters, operated by electricity receive the sand from the agitators. These filters have a hollow rim about five inches thick and four feet across the face.

These hollow rims are divided into two horizontal apartments. The larger or outer cavity receives the sand. On the inner side there is a layer of canvas covered with canvas. A pump draws the liquid gold through the canvas. The cloth prevents the sand from going through. Then this liquid containing the gold is run into tanks containing zinc shavings, the gold adheres to the zinc and the cyanide solution is drawn off and pumped back in the solution tank.

This plant is located about one mile west of Jacksonville on Jackson creek, and is so located that the sand from the Opp mine is conveyed to the plant in a flume. Mr. Nye of the Nye-Crouch Reduction company told the reporter about a man in California who had 40 tons of ore that would assay $8 per ton and wanted Mr. Nye to install a plant to separate, this ore for him. The total amount of gold in the rock would hardly pay the freight on the plant.

This plant will handle about 150 tons of sand daily, and they have in sight enough sand to run about one year. When the mine starts the sand will be conveyed direct to the cyanide plant from the concentrators at the mill.

TOWNS ARE JUDGED BY THEIR PAPERS

The local paper is sent to all parts of the United States and people in all walks of life read it. The business man and wholesaler takes the paper for the purpose of finding out who the progressive business men are in a community: if he finds a local merchant writing catchy advertisements and using good space he will know that the merchant is a good business man and will handle more goods than a man who uses little or no space.

The eastern farmer gets the paper and if he sees that the merchants support the paper liberally the farmers must be prosperous, and should he decide to come west he will invariably seek the community where the merchants support their local paper.

The manufacturer will only locate in a live community because he must depend largely on the community spirit to dispose of his goods.

Merchants and business men who advertise liberally can expect liberal patronage from the community. A half page advertisement in a paper will pay. It is your cheapest and most profitable salesman. Your advertisements will be read in homes where you are unable to go—where it would cost you many times the price of an advertisement to solicit business.

Advertising is a legitimate business and should not be considered an act of charity. The reading public is educated to read advertising matter as well as news, and those who are better posted on what has been advertised know more about the better grades of materials and how to buy.

Notice the large and catchy advertisements in the daily papers, and the trade going away that should be kept at home. The large department stores in Portland have started a mail order department. And, although the goods sent out from these places are much higher in price than the same grade of goods can be bought for here at home, the catchy advertisement will induce the people to send away for their goods and pay a large freight charge. They don't have an opportunity to see the goods before they buy, but they will send away just the same "because they read it in an advertisement."

BENSON BELIEVES IN INSURANCE DEPOSIT

One of the features of the report of Secretary of State Benson is his view of the insurance business, in which he takes issue with Governor Chamberlain who in his message to the Legislature recommended the repeal of the act requiring fire insurance companies to deposit $50,000 with the State Treasurer before being qualified to do business in the state. Governor Chamberlain argued that the repeal would permit more companies to come and that policyholders would benefit by the competition, but Secretary Benson believes the present deposit law is a complete offset to less reliable insurance.

In the event that the surety bond system suggested by the Governor and others be adopted and substituted for the cash deposit law, Secretary Benson suggests that such requirements be extended to all classes of insurance. He says also that the business relating to insurance has grown to such proportions within the past few years that it requires more time and attention than the Secretary can afford to give, and suggests that a separate department be created for the supervision of the insurance business.

The tax of 2 per cent upon the net premiums collected by insurance companies and paid to the State Treasurer amounted to over $63,000 during 1906 and a little over $60,000 in 1907.

Secretary Benson's estimate of the appropriations necessary for the needs of the state government for 1909-1910 is $3,407,829, as compared to $2,523,516 for the 1907-1908 period. Among the principal items of increase is an estimate of $125,000 for the public printing fund, which is due to the enactment of the corrupt practices act by the people, which provides for the publication and distribution of pamphlets at both the primary and general elections and 175,000 of such pamphlets will be required at the primary and general elections in 1910.

The deficiencies in several of the funds for which appropriations were made by the 1907 Assembly amount to $31,000 to the date of the close of the report period, and these were considerably increased during the last quarter of the year not covered by the report.

LEAVES HOME WITHOUT WARNING

Gertrude Genant, aged 11 and Pearl Dox, aged 12, became tired of their surroundings and on Wednesday the two girls left for parts unknown.

The girls started to school Wednesday morning as usual taking their lunch. They did not return home after school and an investigation developed that they were not in attendance at school during the day. The officers were notified and a search of the city was made when it was learned that the two girls were seen walking on the railroad track in the direction of Medford about 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The motives for leaving home are not known because both girls had good homes and pleasant surroundings. The Genant girl was recently presented with a piano and had developed considerable skill in playing. Miss Dox was staying with her grandparents her mother being in a hospital in California.

HAD MONEY

The girls had some money but the exact amount is not known. Pearl Dox had a small bank with some money in which she took, and the Genant girl had $5.00.

They took plenty of clothing which was taken from their rooms without their parents knowledge.

It is thought that they will seek employment as waitresses in some hotel or restaurant because the Genant girl had been assisting her mother of mornings and evenings in the Lyder hotel.

The small towns throughout the valley were notified and a description of the girls given the officers.

The girls were located at the Oregon hotel in Ashland Thursday by the police in that city and returned home. They stayed over night in the hotel Wednesday night and had a room paid for the next night.

A HARD STRUGGLE

Many a Jacksonville Citizen Finds the Struggle Hard

With a back constantly aching, With distressing urinary disorders, Daily existence is but a struggle. No need to keep it up, Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you. Jacksonville people endorse this claim:

Jesse Freeman, living at Sterling Mine, Jacksonville, Ore., says: "I actually believe that Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. I suffered from kidney diseases for a long time before I realized what it was. I thought at first the symptoms would pass away, but instead they increased in severity until I was suffering untold agony. I was treated by physicians and used many remedies but obtained no relief. My worst troubles were pains in my back and limbs and irregularity of the kidney secretions. I was unable to rest or sleep well on account of the pains and was stiff and lame at times as to be unable to get about. At one time I was laid up for several weeks and unable to work. I finally learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and as they were so highly recommended, I procured a box at the City Drug Store and began using them. This remedy seemed to be just what I required, far in less than two weeks the beneficial results were apparent. I continued using the remedy, improved steadily and by the time I had used seven boxes I was better than I had been for years. I am now absolutely free from any symptom of kidney trouble and give the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

But, value for value, the International fabrics cannot be duplicated anywhere at any price—nor in the elegance of their designs and colorings. And you ought to see the STYLES at your disposal just now. They will more than please you—aye! please you as much as the tailoring itself, the grace, the hang and the fit.
