TRAINS THROUGH TREE LANES

Charles R. Lamb's Suggestions Offered to Leading American Railroads.

The new suggestions made by Charles R. Lamb of the Tree Planting association of New York city for planting trees in the streets of New York and for planting trees on either side of a railroad track throughout an entire right of way can be applied to towns as well as cities. Trees along railroad tracks would be planted for a twofold purpose—to provide the timber needed for railroad ties and for the increased artistic effect.

Mr. Lamb's suggestions are being offered to the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Erie and other railroads in the United States. Mr. Lamb has suggested the cutting down for use in ties of the alternating trees, thus keeping a continuous line of growing trees, the ones removed being replaced by smaller growths, which, in turn, would be full grown trees when the second cutting was made.

Mr. Lamb makes additional suggestions as to the co-operation of the Tree Planting association with the local authorities of each city and town and with the civic associations interested in the beautification of their cities or towns so that the tree planting would be developed from the railroad tracks around the stations and on the main streets or the roads leading to the stations. The inevitable result, in Mr. Lamb's judgment, would be that the principle of tree planting would be developed in each community as its beauty, practicability and economy of administration became appreciated under these suggestions.

"The work of the society," said Mr. Lamb, "has been broadened during the last season under Colonel Mitchell, the president, and John Y. Culyer, the advisory forester, and has become more national in scope. The society offers its services as to advice to all organizations, whether public, semipublic or private, even to the extent of the various land building schemes, wherever by so doing the work of tree planting can be developed effectively. 'He who plants a tree works for posterity.'"

"A generous woman has given the society 100 trees to be planted at her expense in connection with the public school buildings of New York or in the congested east side sections."
