OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF JACKSONVILLE, OREGON

Published every Saturday by the Post Publishing Co.
J. B. Barnes, Editor

Admitted as second-class matter at Jacksonville, Oregon.

SATURDAY, MARCH 6, 1909.

SUBSCRIPTION
One year, by mail, $1.50.

Don't we need more back-bone for the interests of humanity? Not a spinal column that cannot yield or bend; but upright, and that will fearlessly express upright and just opinions—a gentle, honest steadfastness, which is cruel never.

A small package, weighing about one ounce, was brought over from Medford Wednesday evening on the train and Mr. Barnum charged the consignee 25 cents freight. The S. P. charges 25 cents for 20 pounds from Portland.

There are too many men who expect an editor to slave in defense of their pet notions and hobbies, advocate their views against the strongest opposition and then coolly withhold the business support by which alone a small newspaper can live.

PRESIDENT TAFT

Thursday President Roosevelt turned over the reins of government to his successor, President Taft. The business interests have confidence in President Taft which is a guarantee of prosperity. The present price of wheat ($1.17 per bushel) is due to the present administration. The people are benefitted throughout the entire country. What more could be asked? Mills and factories have been started thousands of idle men have been employed, railroads are preparing for vast improvements and extensions. The people have confidence in the new president.

For six or eight months before a presidential election the money interests begin to call in their money which accounts for the hard times preceding a presidential election. It cannot be expected of these men to invest heavily when the form of government may be changed which would mean ruin to many.

How to Kill Your Town

Kick.
Keep kicking.
And don't quit kicking.
One pull one way and one t'other.
Go to other towns to buy your goods.
Denounce your merchants because they make a profit on their goods.
Knife every man who disagrees with you on the methods of increasing business.
Make your own town out a very bad place, and stab it every chance you get.
Refuse to unite in any scheme for the betterment of the material interests of the people.
Tell your merchant that you can buy your goods a great deal cheaper in another town and charge him with extortion.

Keep every cent you get, and don't do anything of a public nature unless you can make something out of it directly.

When you say anything of your town say it in such a way that it will leave the impression that you have no faith in it.

Patronize outside newspapers to the exclusion of your own, and then denounce them for not being as large as the city papers.

The Convict—His Family—Law

It is urged that convicts must not be kept idle, that they must earn their living, that the people should not be taxed to feed and clothe an army of criminals, and so forth, and so forth.

Let us see how this works. The state arrests a young fellow, who, let us say, in a drunken quarrel has stabbed a companion. He is hurried away to prison. He is brought into court, tried and convicted. He is sent to prison for five years or for ten years, or for life. All the while a young wife and a half dozen little children are left without their natural protector and support. They huddle in a corner of the court room. They hear the lawyers' yawn. They listen to the verdict. The case is closed. The young father is bundled off in one direction in chains. The young family is turned off in another in tears. The state takes the time, the earnings of the one to itself, leaving the other to starve. The mother dies of despair. The boys grow up thieves. The girls grow up harlots. The law is vindicated. The taxpayers are protected. The criminal classes are replenished. Is it not damnable? Does not the society which tolerates such monstrosities deserve all the evils it entails upon itself? The state has no right to take that man's labor from his wife and children and give them no equivalent. It should punish the guilty, not the innocent. Every dollar that is diverted in this way from the natural needs of the helpless to the uses of the public, is base blood money that should and does carry with it the curse of God.

THE NEW BOARD

The election last Tuesday brought two new men in the field, Dr. T. T. Shaw and Chas. F. Dunford. The result was all that could be expected and the vote was evidence that the people want a new Jacksonville and the start must be made by the Board of Trustees.

There will be a meeting of the new board Monday night when a president will be elected and the committees will be appointed. There will not be much if any business transacted. It is probable that a charter election will be called in the near future although it is not decided at what meeting the matter will be brought up. Had the old board put the matter of a charter election before the people at the last election a large sum of money would be saved the taxpayers.

The new board is made up largely of progressive business men and the voters may reasonably expect something for their money.

No business was transacted during 1908. The members would meet two or three times each month but positively nothing was done aside from allowing the regular monthly bills.

One member would say something and the whole bunch would "chew the rag" but say nothing of importance to the city. What is the use? Two men would favor improvements and two would not and if the two who did not favor improvements were absent no meeting would be held, the president would call a meeting for some other day.

A majority of the board is in favor of making a city out of Jacksonville and no doubt before another year drifts around many improvements will be started. Then the town will grow but not before. The man who is too stingy to work for improvements is not fit to be classed among the citizens of the town. The small increase in taxes will double the value of property.

MANUFACTORIES

You may take the dullest and most prosaic town and erect within its borders a busy, thriving manufacturing institution, where large numbers of workmen are employed, and a new life is at once imparted to the place. The dull monotony of the past gives way to the sound of the steam whistle and the clangor of the shop. The streets no longer look deserted. People move with an active restlessness in strange contrast to the times when no manufacturing was carried on in their midst. The liveliest towns that we have in this country are those wholly devoted to manufacturing. The dreariest towns, where dry-rot is visible on every hand, are those where in no workshops are to be found. Manufacturing towns are not only more active, but as a rule they are prosperous, as well as being far more enterprising and affording better social and commercial advantages. The typical manufacturing towns are to be found in New England, in fact the Connecticut river may be said to be lined with them. It is invigorating to the mind, as well as to the sight, to travel through these towns, which justly may be termed "bee hives of industry." An air of thrift and enterprise is everywhere displayed. The proprietors of the industrial institutions the tradesmen, the artisans and other citizens exhibit every outward indication of that contentment and happiness which arise from a prosperous condition.

There is a reason for this—a social as well as a business reason. First, the presence of workshops and factories in the midst of a community is in itself a source of activity. These institutions drawing to them daily their scores and their hundreds of workmen bring life and activity, not for a week, or a month, but as long as they are in operation. But in towns purely commercial, or in lazy, seaport towns where the bulk of the male portion of the population is at sea, there is a too perceptible lack of life and animation. This can be better observed than described. But to one standing in a manufacturing town at the morning hour, at noon, or at night, when the workmen are wending their ways to and from work, there need be little said to prove whence the vitality of the town arises.
