PROOF OF DISCOVERY.

Bro. Putnam devotes considerable space in Tuesday's Tribune to prove that the Oregonian has at last discovered Rogue River valley and its fruit growing possibilities.

The discovery so tardily made is doubtless due to the conviction that it is now easier to praise than to ignore. Southern Oregon has somehow managed to get along without much boosting from Portland or Portland papers, her fruits have obtained the top prices in the markets of the world and are in demand everywhere, and the residents of this valley, the greatest fruit growing section of the state, will be glad to know that Portland has at last awakened to a knowledge of the fact that Rogue River valley is in the State of Oregon.

"Better late than never." The recognition though tardy, is welcome.

The Southern Pacific Co. has just published a booklet entitled "Well Irrigation of small farms in the Willamette Valley" by R. M. Brereton of Portland.

The booklet is devoted to an explanation of the well irrigation system and the many advantages to be derived therefrom. This book is well worth careful perusal by every farmer in Oregon. Copies can be obtained free of charge by addressing Mr. Wm. McMurray, Gen. Pass. Agt. Portland, Ore.
