

CLEAN UP

Inspectors Find Orchards in Good Shape but Trees on Back Door Lots Need Cleaning Up.

By P. J. O'GARA,
Assistant Pathologist Department of Agriculture

During the past few weeks the county fruit inspectors have been inspecting the commercial orchards of the Rogue River Valley. With the exception only of some abandoned tracts, they have found everything in a very satisfactory condition. They have done their work well, and their reports show that the commercial orchardist of the entire valley are cooperating in the work of eradicating all diseases and pests. The success which has been attained in the control of pear blight has been so striking, especially in very large orchards, that the writer desires at this time to voice his appreciation of the good work which has been done.

It will be noticed in the above comment, that mention has been made of the orchards not situated within our towns and villages where a far different state of affairs exists. There are some notable cases where fruit growers owning small tracts within the city limits of the several towns in the valley have done very creditable work under most adverse conditions. It is really surprising that they were able to hold their own at all. Those who did are men who have no other business within the city limits than that of taking care of their small orchards. Strictly speaking, the business man or shopkeeper cannot look after the details of orchard fruit raising in the way that the orchardist would do it. Since this is true the back lot is no place for growing fruit trees, and the front yard had better be given over to shade trees, instead of fruit trees that cannot be classed as shade trees.

The orchardist depends upon the product of his fruit trees for his existence, while the business man in the city does not consider the few trees he may have as any real asset, and, as a matter of fact, they have no place in his yearly balance sheet. The business man is entirely dependant upon the farmer for his welfare. We should like to ask why we have the several thriving towns in the Rogue River valley—the answer is easy; the value of the orchards, as well as their products have made these towns what they are. The other great resources surrounding these towns were here long before the orchards were planted, yet they did not seem to have the almost miraculous effect upon their growth as have the orchards.

There is but one conclusion: The man who owns fruit trees within the city limits must be willing to care for them as does the practical orchardist or he will have to submit to their removal by the county inspectors. Unless he can keep out pear blight, scale and other diseases which are a menace to the commercial orchard, his trees must be cut down. The county fruit inspectors have done everything possible to make the back lot orchardist understand the necessity of eradicating all diseases, but much of his valuable time has been lost through the unwillingness or inability of the town orchardist to cooperate and do his duty. With so many trees in the towns given absolutely no attention, instead of being a valuable asset they are in reality a menace to the fruitgrowing industry of the entire Rogue River valley.

A thorough inspection and eradication of diseased town lot orchards has been begun, and the entire force of county inspectors are at work in the city of Ashland. As soon as their work is completed there, they will in turn clean up Phoenix, Talent, Jacksonville, Medford, Central Point, Gold Hill, Woodville, Eagle Point and other places. The same program will be carried out in Josephine county. The inspectors will enforce the horticultural statutes to the letter, and in this work they have back of them the state horticultural commission and the county courts. I hope that no one will plead ignorance of the law. Furthermore, there has been plenty of opportunity for everyone to get information on fruit diseases and how to eradicate them. The federal government as well as the state and county has made it very easy to get such information through literature, which may be had for the asking. A federal officer has been stationed in the valley during the past two years in order to help those desirous of getting the very best information on every phase of fruit growing, and especially in the matter of eradicating pear blight.

This letter has been prepared in order to give anyone a chance to clean up before the inspectors come. I wish to assure every delinquent that it will be much cheaper to have this work done themselves than to wait for a county officer to do it for him. A much neater job of eradication may be done by the owner himself than by an officer of the law who has little time for nice work. It is not the work of an inspector to cut out blight, but rather to instruct. You would hardly expect the county to pay a man to cultivate your trees or to prune them; why, then, should you expect the county to pay men to do the actual work of cleaning up your orchards? It is the inspector's place to order this work done at your expense if you do not see fit to do it yourself. The fruit interests of the valley are dependent upon you for cooperation, and they are asking no more of you than is just. Clean up your back lot orchards and help to boost the Rogue River valley.

From Idaho

The following letter, with money order for $1.50 was received Saturday from "Uncle" Jimmie Twogood at Boise, Idaho.

D. W. BAGSHAW, ED. POST.

Dear Sir:—I purchased postoffice order for you some time ago but it got mislaid. Two weeks ago I fell off the water wagon (beer) struck on back of hand and put it out of commission for writing. Then came the State Fair, my busy week, and neglected to write. We just got through Oct. 16th with the biggest and best week's State Fair ever held on the coast. Those who had been there said our fruit, vegetable, grain and mineral display beat Seattle out of sight. Had more than double the space under cover than ever before with every available foot of space utilized. There was everything there most ever invented in machinery, and although this is an off year for fruit, still there was immense quantities on display, many thousands of boxes all packed for eastern markets. They can't get up any better fairs in any country. The weather was ideal, averaging 70 degrees in the shade with not enough to straighten the flags at 12 M.

Yours truly,
J. H. TWOGOOD.
