

Case 36 H.P., 10-Ton Road Roller

The name of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company, Inc., Racine, Wis., is known in every household in the Great West and Middle West, where the products of this company have been distributed for many years. There are thousands of Case products in use through the country, and there are thousands of other buyers who would demand them were they only aware of the high stanards of efficiency and general durability that they represent.

The Case 36 H.P., 10-ton Road Roller is a very desirable piece of machinery for road contractors and builders. It is an absolutely efficient machine, which has proven its ability as to quality and quantity of work to many owners. This road roller is sold $2,200 f.o.b. Racine, Wisconsin, with simple cylinder, and for $2,300 with compound cylinder. These are payment prices.

This company also sells the well known line of Troy Dump Wagons and Dump Boxes, also Road Scrapers, Road Drags, Road Rooters, Stone Crushers, Rotary Stone Screens and Road Sprinkling Wagons. The attention of government contractors and other officials is called to these excellent products. Army engineer officers and other readers of this paper, who are connected with road construction in any branch, should write to the Road Machinery Department, J. I. Case Threshing Machinery Co., Local Agency Jacksonville, Oregon, for the Contractor's General Purpose Engine and Municipal Tractor catalog and mention this paper.

"I am going down to the soldiers, I am no longer a vintner; I am a king!" And he said this in a manner truly

"Gott!" burst from the prince regent. "This boy has marrow in his bones, after all. But the incarceration will the other side of the passes."

"Ten thousand? Well, they shall stay there," said the king determinedly. "I shall not begin my reign with war. I will tell the duke the truth. He will not dare go far."

"He will be a good politician, too," said Ludwig, with a smile of approval at Carmichael. "No, boy, there will be no war. And yet I was prepared for it, nor was I wrong in doing so. Already, but for Herbeck, there would be plenty of fighting in the passes. Ach! Could you but see the princess!" "I have seen her," replied the king. "Heaven would have been kinder had I seen her months ago."

"Say to his serene highness, then, that you are willing to marry her." "I'm afraid you do not understand, uncle," the king replied sadly. "I have the supreme happiness to love and to be loved. Of that nothing can rob me. And for some time to come, uncle mine, I shall treasure that happiness." "And the little Gretchen?" "Yes, yes! I have been a scoundrel." And the king's eyes grew moist. "You are happy, Mr. Carmichael. You have no crown to weigh against your love.' And from that moment Carmichael's heart warmed toward the young man, whose sorrow was greater than his own, for the king was giving up the woman who loved him, while Carmichael was only giving up the woman he loved, which is a distinction.

"Come, uncle," said the young king;

"let us see what is going on downstairs." Carmichael followed them down. "There they are, men!" cried the subchief. "You are under arrest!" "I am the king of Jugendheit," calmly announced Frederick Leopold. "Will you subject me to public arrest?"

"And I," said the uncle, "am Ludwig, prince regent.

The subchief laughed uproarrously. The king of Jugendheit and the prince regent! This was a good joke indeed! "Your majesty and your royal highness," said the subchief, his eyes twinkling, "will do me the honor of accompanying me to the Steinschloss. You are accused of being military spies from Jugendheit." "May I retain this bundle?" inquired

"Yes. I know what is in it. ward, march!" Carmichael made as though to protest, but Prince Ludwig signed for him to be silent. An hour later Gretchen appeared before Frau Bauer. Gretchen had gone home immediately after the termination of the fight in the garden.

"He was not hurt, frau?" she asked timidly. "Oh, no! The two of them gave themthe Steinschloss by this time."

"The Steinschloss!" Gretchen blanched. "Holy mother, what has happened?" "Why, your vintner and Herr Ludwig were arrested an hour ago, ac-

Her highness was dreaming. She had fallen into this habit of late. A maid of honor announced that the young woman Gretchen sought her presence.

"Admit her. She will be a tonic," said Hildegarde. Gretchen appeared, red eyed and disheveled. Instantly she flung herself at the feet of the princess. "Why, Gretchen! "They will not let me see him, highness!" Gretchen choked. "What has happened, child?" They have arrested him as a spy from Jugendheit, and he is innocent. Save him, highness!" "How can I save him?"

"He is not a spy."

"That must be proved, Gretchen. I cannot go to the Steinschloss and order them to liberate him." She lifted Gretchen to her feet. "I have been there, and they will not let me see him. I love him so! "I can arrange that for you. I will go with you myself to the prison."

"Thanks, highness, thanks!" Gretchen was hysterical. The king and his uncle had been given adjoining cells on the ground floor. The princess and ber protegee were admitted without objection. The sergeant in charge of that floor even permitted them to go into the corridor unattended. Voices.

"Hush!" whispered her highness, pressing Gretchen's arm.

"Ach! Wall, dear nephew; beat your hands upon the bars, curse, waste your breath on stone. I.d i not warn you against this very thing when you proposed this mad junket? A fine scandal!

Woe to the duke for this affront!" Gretchen started to speak, but the princess quickly put her hand over

"Uncle, I will have revenge for this!" "Goed! Bang-bang! Slash and cut! War is a great invention-on paper. Come, my boy; you were sensible enough when they brought us here. Control yourself. Be a king in all the word implies. For my part, I begin to

"You here, Gretchen?" The king covered her hands with passionate kisses. "Yes, yes! They have made a dreadful mistake. You are no spy from Ju-

Prince Ludwig sadly. "The king!" Gretchen laughed shrilly. What jest is this, Leopold? The king, still holding her hands, looked down. "Leopold!" plaintively.

Still he did not speak, still he averted his head. But God knew that his heart was on the rack. "Leo, look at me! You are laughing!" Gretchen cried. "Why, did we not work together in the vineyards, and did we not plan for the future? Ah, yes! You are a king only to me

'For what?" "For being a villain! Yes," his voice keen with agony, "I am the king of Jugendheit. But am I less a man for that? Ah, God help me, I have a right to love like other men! TWIN LOCKETS.

ARMICHAEL tramped about his room restless, uneasy, starting at sounds. He was waiting for Grumbach and his confreres. Anything but this suspense. A full day! And deeper, firmer, became his belief and conviction that Grumbach's affair vitally concerned her highness. He welcomed the knock on his door. Grumbach came in carrying under his arm a small bundle.

Where are your, companions?" "They are waiting outside." "The duke agrees," went on Carmichael. "He will give us an audience at 8:30." "Did you mention my name?" I went roundabout. I also obtained his promise to say nothing to Herbeck till the interview was over." Grumbach spread out on the bea t contents of the bundle. "Look at these and tell me what you see, captain." Carmichael inspected the little yellow shoes. He turned them over and over in his hand. He shook out the fold of the little cloak and the locket fell on the bed. "When did you get this?" he cried excitedly. "It is her highness'?" "So it is, captain, but I have carried it about me all these years.'

"What?" "Yes, captain. Count von Herbeck is a great statesman, but be made a terrible mistake this time. Listen. As sure as we are in this room together I believe that she whom we call the princess is not the daughter of the grand duke." Carmichael sat down on the edge of the bed numb and without any clear idea where he was. Free! If she was not a princess she was free, free! The duke allowed the quartet to remain standing for some time. He strode up and down before them, his eyes straining at the floor, his hands behind his back.
