GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE.

All Progressive Reforms Have That For Their Object, Says Wilson.

Discussing the progressive movement in politics, Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey said recently: "If you will look at the proposed reforms, proposed by men in both parties, meant to serve the country in some special way, you will see that each particular reform has a definite object. For example, the question of the cost of living is a question which touches the great body of the people. It does not touch those exceptional persons whose income is abundant. It touches the whole body of the people. The question of direct primaries touches the accessibility of the offices by the people. It touches the means which they are to exercise to put the sort of men they desire into office. The question of the equalization of taxation means that equality which is justice, that fairness which will see that no man is taxed more than another man or upon a different basis from other men or other corporations. The question of corrupt practices in elections is a question of the attacks which have been made upon the virtue of the people.

"Every direction you turn you will see that what we are straining after is to bring the government back within the touch of the people and to use it in behalf of the people. Upon what sort of occasion, therefore, in what sort of campaign, should a man who remembers the long traditions of American government, take greater pleasure and zest than in a campaign which has such objects?"

THE PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT.

It is Permeating the Whole Country, Declares Woodrow Wilson.

How widespread is the progressive movement in American politics was eloquently expressed by Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey in a recent speech. The governor said:

"It does not require any great imagination to think that high thoughts and purposes in politics are running subtly through every household and every member of every household in this country. It does not need that you should touch elbows—actually touch elbows—with men in the street and men in the shop in order to know the great issues of human happiness that are involved in a great contest like this, for the question of the tariff is not a mere question of policy. It is a question of the rearrangement of the public interests as you touch every household in this country, and how any man in such circumstances can hold his head up after he has voted for a special interest without a just conception of the common interests for one cannot comprehend.

"But whether men can comprehend it or not, help it or not, we all know that the 'mills of the gods grind slowly,' and they 'grind exceedingly fine,' and the men who now resist this great impulse of reform, the men who impede this great compulsion of public interest, will be ground so fine in some of these mills of the gods that their very dust will be imperceptible."

I am accused of being a radical. If to seek to go to the root is a radical, a radical I am. After all, everything that flowers in beauty in the air of heaven draws its fairness, its vigor, from its roots. Nothing living can blossom into fruitage unless through nourishing stalks deep planted in the common soil. Up from that soil, up from the silent bosom of the earth, rise the currents of life and energy. Up from the common soil, up from the quiet heart of the people, rise joyously today streams of hope and determination bound to renew the face of the earth in glory.

I tell you the so called radicalism of our times is simply the effort of nature to release the generous energies of our people. This great American people is at bottom just, virtuous and hopeful. The roots of its being are in the soil of what is lovely, pure and of good report, and the need of the hour is just that radicalism that will clear a way for the realization of the aspirations of a sturdy race. — Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey in a Recent Speech.

THE ANDALUSIAN PLAINS.

They Remind the American Traveler of the Western Prairies.

To traverse the great plains of Andalusia is not only to travel through an exceedingly interesting and characteristic part of Spain, but to receive an impression, at least from a distance, of the American prairies as they formerly were.

For miles and miles on either side of the Guadalquivir (which, for all its romantic name, is a very muddy stream) the country stretches away into a faint blue haze of distant hills, with the foreground and middle distance full of herds of horses, mules and cattle, feeding slowly or lying at ease in the long grass and low, gorse-like scrub.

The wide and lengthy tracts of grass country, the immense herds and the mounted cowboys combine, says the Wide World, to present an aspect which seems to belong much more to America than to Europe. On closer inspection, of course, this illusion is dispelled.

For example, the horses, instead of having ordinary foals at foot, have mule foals, and interspersed among the horses and cattle are herds of mules, with occasionally a few donkeys. Moreover, near the alquerias or farms will be seen droves of pigs of a dull red color, flocks of goats and in some places merino sheep.

Spain, especially on these plains, is a country of magnificent sunsets. Words fail absolutely to describe the glories of the evening sky. Silent and statuesque against the distant glow one sees silhouetted perhaps a mounted herdsman—a brooding figure motionless and grim—or on the river's bank a black bull standing dark against the roseate sky.

Again in the moonlight one may descry the faint and dusky forms of feeding cattle, the moonlight now and again catching on a gleaming horn. The silence, broken by the faint lowing of distant kine or the weird cry of some night bird, gives an enhanced beauty to a wonderful scene not easily forgotten.

MARRYING EN MASSE.

Curious New Year's Custom of Plougastels of Brittany.

Some curious and distinctive marriage customs prevail among the Plougastels, a strange race of people (thought by some to be of Asiatic origin) inhabiting Plougastel Daoulas, in Brittany, who are great strawberry growers. They are also noted for intermarrying exclusively with each other. The alliances, which are engineered by an intermediary known as the basralaine, all take place on one day, usually the first Tuesday of the new year. The basralaine starts their campaign in September as soon as the harvest is gathered in, demanding on behalf of the intending bridegroom the hand of his bride elect.

The courtship is then authorized and proceeds with ardor during the dark months which follow. Last year twenty-three couples were married in the parish church on Jan. 8.

After the ceremony come dancing and feasting. The great dinner which is served at the numerous inns begins at 2 o'clock and lasts well on to midnight. The favorite dish is tripe, and an inordinate quantity of alcohol is consumed—one would like to know with what results.

The whole place is en fete, and there are never fewer than 2,000 guests. After the orgy the united couples repair to their separate homes. They do not take up their joint life until the following evening (after the service for the dead and a second feast, when they are escorted to the bridal chamber by a large contingent of groomsmen and bridesmaids, to whom soup and cakes are presented by the newly married.—Sphere.

Brougham and Mullied Port.

Lord Brougham who as a member of the house of commons was a most abstemious man, upon his promotion to the peerage acquired less commendable habits. During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mulled port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yes, on my bended knee I supplicate you—reject not this bill!") he knelt on the woosack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" that "he remained some time as if in prayer, but his friends, alarmed lest he should be suffering from the effects of mulled port, picked him up and placed him safely on the woosack."

INFLUENCE.

He who wishes to exert a useful influence must be careful to insult nothing. Let him not be troubled by what seems absurd, but let him consecrate his energies to the creation of what is good. He must not demolish, but build. He must raise temples where mankind may come and partake of the purest pleasures.—Goethe.

Oregon Sidelights.

The Hermiton Herald has celebrated its sixth birthday.

Work on the Madras state bank's new brick building will begin soon.

The Moose of Baker now occupy new quarters in the Elk's building, and at an early date will give a house warming.

Eugene Register: Mr. Clover, of Lebanon, intends to go to the headwaters of the Santiam and spend the winter trapping.

The Klamath Chronicle has become the property of E. J. Murray, who has been connected with newspapers at Klamath Falls for the past five years.

The postal department has accepted the offer of the Odd Fellows of Hillsboro to furnish quarters for the post-office. Removal is to be made December 1.

Stanfield Standard: Watermelons and cantaloupes are still on the market and are being enjoyed fresh from the vines by the people of the Stanfield country.

A dozen strawberries, about the size of peaches and filling a dish seven inches in diameter have been exhibited at Cottage Grove by Mrs. C. E. Stewart, a resident.

The people of Banks have their eyes on springs that would give the town abundance of water as good as Bull Run affords Portland, according to the Banks Herald.

Condon Times: The county jail is without an occupant and Sheriff Montague has taken the opportunity to have the blankets all laundered and has given the jail a general cleaning up.

Eugene Guard: Ray Keoppr shot a hawk measuring six feet three inches from tip to tip, near Irving. This was perhaps the largest chicken hawk ever killed in this part of the valley.

Sherwood News Sheet: Fred Elwert who has been shipping apples packed by Hood River people, is responsible for the story that in many instances they were not able to get four apples of the King variety in a row lengthwise of the box.

Medford Mail Tribune: W. J. Petty is in receipt of a post card which traveled part of the distance between London, England, and Medford, Or., by the aerial post that has been established between London and Windsor, a distance of 39 miles, by the British government.—Journal.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lollar of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market." Sold by all dealers.
