

The Vacuous Life.
 People without any form of religion, without superstition, devoid of any thought of the future state, have been found in the interior forests of Sumatra, according to Dr. Wilhelm Volz, the geologist of the University of Breslau, who made extensive journeys through the island. There he found the Kubus, as he named them, who are scarcely to be distinguished from the small manlike ape of the Indo-Malayan countries. They are wanderers through the forest seeking food. They have no property. They are not hunters, but simply collectors. They seek merely sufficient nuts, fruits and other edible growths to keep them alive. The Kubus wage very little warfare upon the small amount of animal life in their silent and somber land. The only notion he could get from them of a difference between a live and a dead person was that the dead do not breathe. He infers that they are immeasurably inferior to the paleolithic man of Europe who fashioned tools and hunted big game with his flint tipped arrow and knife. Intellectual atrophy is the result of the Kubus' environment. The words they know are almost as few as the ideas they try to express.—Chicago News.

Golf and a Prince.
 "Golf has its humors," said a champion player. "And this struck me particularly in a conversation at a golf club that I once had with a Persian prince. The prince, as he sat on the club piazza watching the various champions drive off, drawled:
 "I don't see very much in golf. No object is to be gained by the depositing of a white ball in a subterranean cavity, and if any object were to be gained the shortest and surest method would surely be to carry the ball in the hand from cavity to cavity."
 "But, prince," I said, "the difficulty of getting the ball into the cavity, as you call them, is what constitutes the attraction of the game."
 "The difficulty constitutes the attraction, eh? The prince frowned. "Well," he went on, "it would be more difficult to shove with a coal shovel than a razor, but I don't think many men are tempted on that account to remove their heads each morning in that way."—Exchange.

Undertakers.
 In England in 1614 undertakers were men of influence who undertook for a consideration to get such persons returned to parliament as would prove submissive to the royal will of King James I. The three chief undertakers of 1614 were Lords Bacon, Somerset and Neville. They undertook to bribe the chief speakers and men of influence in parliament that year over to the side of the king, with but partial success. Then there were undertakers in Ireland in 1608. They were English and Scotch colonists sent to north Ireland and were each allotted 2,000 acres of land. They were men of capital and undertook to pay a mark a year for every six acres and to admit no recusant for tenants; hence the name as applied to them. But neither the histories nor the dictionaries give any reason for calling the men who bury our dead undertakers.

Granite Telegraph Poles.
 The great abundance of granite rocks and the lack of timber in the southern part of Switzerland have led to the employment of the former for purposes usually filled by the latter. Thus in many sections of the southern country the fences are of granite instead of wood, the supports for the grapevines are granite posts, and pavements, etc., are of granite. Perhaps the most striking departure from the ordinary, however, is the use of granite pillars in place of the usual wooden telegraph, telephone and electric power transmission poles. Near Lake Como and Lake Maggiore the old highroads originally constructed by the Romans are fringed with granite pillars eighteen feet high carrying telegraph wires.—Popular Mechanics.
