TO AMEND CHARTER

Medford Council Calls Special Election May 14.

The city council Wednesday at a special meeting voted that at a special election to be held May 14 three amendments will be offered to the city charter for the voters' consideration.

Amendment No. 1 proposes that assessment ordinances and certain resolutions be placed in the newspaper but once instead of three times as provided by the charter at this time. After being run one time the amendment provides that the ordinance or resolution shall be posted five times in a public and conspicuous place.

Amendment No. 2 would amend the charter so as to give the city council the right to prohibit boxing contests and sparring matches in the city. At the present time the state law holds that it is lawful to conduct boxing contests.

Amendment No. 3 proposes the creating of a municipal judge or police judge to try all cases of non-compliance to city ordinances. The position will be elective after the initial term, when he will be appointed by the council.—Sun.

PORTLAND LETTER

Development League Congress to be Held in Seattle.

Portland, Or., April 23—More than 1700 commercial organizations in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Minnesota and North and South Dakota are interested in the congress of the Northwestern Development League at Seattle June 5 to 8. In response to the official call issued by President Lewis Penwell, the names of 1135 delegates from cities and towns in the Northwest have been received at the St. Paul office of the League. Governors of the seven states are naming two delegates from each county.

At this congress plans will be discussed for making known the opportunities of the American Northwest everywhere. Business men who have given a year to studying the needs of the Northwest will report their plans and every effort will be made to strengthen and make effective the present organization.

To encourage the raising of flax by Oregon farmers, E. H. Smith, western seed manager of the American Linseed Oil Company, has announced that his firm will distribute up to 100 bushels of seed flax if each rancher will sow one-quarter bushel on one-half acre of land according to directions accompanying each package of 14 pounds of seed. This seed will be shipped freight prepaid upon application to the Portland Linseed Oil Works. This should give each grower from 8 to 12 bushels of seed which he may retain unconditionally for use next year.

Determined to reach Portland in time for the Elk's convention beginning July 8, Cecil Stone, Charles Johnson, Fred Lyons and Herman Clark have started to walk from their home at Brookfield, Mo., to this city and expect to cover every inch of the distance on foot. This unique journey was started in jest. All four had expressed a desire to attend the Portland convention but the state of their finances would not let them to travel by train. "Why not walk?" suggested one. "I'm with you," echoed the other three. So they started. They have mapped out an itinerary and a schedule that will bring them into Portland on Monday, July 8, at 10 A. M. The Elk's convention commission in Portland has agreed to pay their return transportation.

Twenty-five members of the Bayocean Commercial Club joined in a building-fee and in one day erected a structure which will serve during the summer months as the temporary headquarters of the Club. A large fireplace made of cobble stones is one of the interior features. A permanent club building will be erected next Spring.

Alfred R. Lee, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, while on a recent visit to the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, gave it as his opinion that within a short time the Pacific Northwest would be shipping out larger quantities of poultry products than are now being imported. He also stated that few states have natural advantages for successful poultry raising equal to those of Western Oregon.

THE GRIM REAPER

Calls Mrs. Landis at Ashland. Was Sad Shock to Many Friends.

One of the saddest deaths that it has been the duty of this paper to record occurred last night when Mrs. Mattie Wells Landis passed away at the home of her father, James Wells, on Sixth street—death resulting from childbirth.

Mrs. Landis was raised in Ashland and was for several years one of the leading school teachers of the county. She is survived by her husband and parents and four sisters and one brother, J. Percy Wells, county school superintendent of this county.

No arrangements for the funeral have been announced as the family is awaiting the arrival of two sisters who are at present in Klamath county.

Mrs. Landis' death came as a sad shock to her many friends in Ashland and Southern Oregon where she has spent her life until about a year ago when she married Mr. Landis and moved to Albany. — Ashland Record, April 21.

A Profitable Business.

Corvallis, Ore. Apr. 20—"There has been an enormous increase in the production of eggs and poultry in the state in the past two years, but in spite of this the demand has far exceeded the supply, and prices are high as ever," said Prof. James Dryen of the Oregon Agricultural College in discussing the object of the present tour of the poultry demonstration car sent out over the Southern Pacific lines by the college.

"If the farmers of Oregon would keep, on an average, 100 hens instead of about 50 it would shut out the imports and add $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 a year to the wealth of the state."

"The purpose of the demonstration car is to stimulate a greater production of poultry and eggs. The quickest way is to increase the flocks of the farmers rather than to have poultry-keepers start large egg farms. The demand cannot be met by the establishment of large exclusively poultry farms. If the general farmer goes out of the egg-producing business there will soon be an egg famine—possibly a serious financial panic."

Though there are opportunities for profit along special lines in poultry-keeping, the market for specialties is limited, and it would be folly to advise everyone to go into special lines, I am free to confess that we have kept more people out of the poultry business than have gone into it as an exclusive business. I have received great numbers of letters from all parts of the state in which the writers stated that they were going into the business on a large scale, many knowing nothing about poultry. Our plain duty was to advise caution. If every one of them had gone into the business as they intended and invested their all in it, thousands of dollars would have been lost in every county of the state, and the poultry business would have received a black eye."
