The Fourth passed very quietly in this place, many of the residents going to Swayne's Flat and still others to Ashland and Medford. County offices, and business houses generally were closed; flags were in evidence upon the front of many business establishments and at a few residences. One float, decorated in the National colors, was visible upon the streets, it was owned and propelled by John Miller, Jr. and presented quite an attractive appearance. The American Bonding Co. of Baltimore will go on your bond and write burglary insurance.

Johnson Defeats Flynn.

East Las Vegas, N. M., July 5.—Jack Johnson was given a decision over Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, yesterday afternoon in the ninth round after the police had ordered the fight stopped. Johnson had his own way all through the battle, beating Flynn at will. Flynn butted almost continually, despite the warnings of the referee. He repeatedly fouled and showed himself no match for the burly black. Flynn did not venture down town this morning, preferring to remain at his Montezuma Springs quarters until the crowd of fans had dwindled. Johnson, on the other hand, was the picture of good humor and his "golden smile" was very much in evidence.

Appropriates Tools.

A hodo happened in the vicinity of the ice plant last Saturday when the Southern Pacific engineer, who was doing some surveying for the straightening out of the side track, was out of sight. He attached about $25 worth of surveyors' tools and equipment. He was retaken in the afternoon, however, and give a fine of $25 or twelve days in Jacksonville. Being shy the twenty-five, he is now in the county bastle. —Tidings.

SUMMONS

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR JACKSON COUNTY.

Sarah S. Ingalls, Plaintiff, vs. Henry Ingalls, Defendant.

To Henry Ingalls, the above named defendant, IN THE NAME OF THE STATE OF OREGON: You are hereby notified that you are required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled court and cause, within ten days from the date of the service this summons upon you if served within Jackson County, Oregon, or if served within any other county within this state, then within twenty days from the date of the service of this summons upon you; or if served by publication, then on or before the last day so prescribed in the order for publication of said summons; and you will take notice that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint within said time, plaintiff will take a default and decree against you for the relief prayed for in her complaint, to-wit: For a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and the above named plaintiff, Sarah S. Ingalls, and for a further decree awarding plaintiff the sole custody of Roy Ingalls and Fern Ingalls minor children, the issues of said marriage, and for plaintiff's costs and disbursements of this suit, and such other and further relief as to the court may seem equitable.

This summons is published in the Jacksonville Post, by order of the Hon. F. M. Cahine, judge of the above entitled court, which said order was made and dated in Chambers on the 5th day of May A. D. 1912, wherein it is ordered that you appear and answer the complaint on file herein on or before the expiration of six weeks from the date prescribed in said order as the date of the first publication of this summons.

The date of the first publication of this summons is June 29, 1912, and the date of the last publication and on or before which date you are required to appear and answer is August 10, 1912. J. A. LEMERY, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Browning's Pets.

Browning shared Rossett's taste for queer pets. His pet owl was well known to visitors at Warwick crescent; also his pet geese, which followed him about like dogs and upon which, "having suffered much from the enckle of reviewers," he bestowed the names of Edinburgh and Quarterly. As a boy he had a monkey and an eagle in the garden at Camberwell, and later in life his pockets were often full of an canny "portable creatures" to which he had taken a fancy—frogs, toads, lizards and even snakes.—London Standard.

A Man of Nerve.

He—I called to see you last evening. She—Yes? He—Yes; the servant told me you were not in. She—Yes; I was so sorry to have missed you. He—I thought you must be. I heard you laughing upstairs in such grief-stricken tones that I almost wept myself out of sympathy.

A Realistic Proposal

By EDNA B. TOWER

It was in the sweet summer time, when the insects were humming, the birds were twittering, the leaves were moving drowsily, that two young persons sat in a flower garden. If the restful scene about them were not enough to stir their young blood to love, the perfume of the flowers was more than enough.

"I went the other night," he said, "to see this young fellow Brown show off in palmistry. He read my lines, and it was really quite remarkable how many truths he told me."

"What did he tell you?" "Well, he said that I hadn't yet met the girl who would make me happy."

He looked at her searchingly. She looked out at the flowers.

"Did he say you had met the girl who would make you miserable?" she asked.

"Well, no; he didn't say anything about that."

"Then he didn't mention any particular girl?"

"No; he didn't."

"Oh, I didn't know but that he had somebody with a red head and freckles in view."

"He explained that what he meant was that I had met a girl who could make me happy if she wanted to, but that she didn't want to."

She was not to be drawn out in this fashion. Young men are prone to fish for a sign. They don't usually get it. The girl prefers to have him do it all alone by himself. It's not her part to tell him anything to aid him in making up his mind whether he is to be accepted or thrown over her shoulder.

"Did he say she was red headed?"

"No. Why do you ask that?"

"Oh, everybody has noticed your attentions to Sue Baker."

"Everybody except myself. I have not noticed it."

"Then it's time you did."

His feeling around for a sign was not succeeding. There was a faint indication of jealousy in this continued introduction of a girl to whom he had shown some attention, but this didn't mean love or that he would be an accepted suitor if he proposed. He was ready to offer both love and marriage, but what man cares to do that without some assurance that he is not to be turned down?

"Miss Baker is a lovely girl," he said after a pause. "Any man who wins her I think she would make happy. Her hair isn't red, it's Auburn, and I never noticed any freckles on her face."

"I dare say she is a beautiful character. That's what you want, I suppose, and if you are color blind she would suit you very well."

"I don't see what she has to do with this conversation. I didn't bring her into it."

He said this in a miffed tone. She recognized that it was time to tighten the line a bit—the fish might get off the hook. But she didn't do any jerking.

"Are you going to the tennis tournament on Saturday?" she asked.

"I don't know. I'm not especially interested in tennis just now."

"Got anything on your mind?"

"Nothing particular—I mean nothing that should make me stay away from the tournament. Shall I drop in for you as I go by?"

"I'm not sure I'll go."

"No; I have a partial engagement for Saturday."

"Oh! The men don't have to work Saturday afternoons. They have a chance to dally with their sweethearts. I should have remembered that."

"I didn't say my engagement was with a man."

"No, but that was to be inferred. Don't you think you could get out of it and go out for a spin in my auto?"

She divined that this indicated an intention to put off what he was trying to get out till the auto ride. He had made several failures before, and she preferred to have it over with.

"No," she replied. "I couldn't."

"I thought you said the engagement was only a partial one."

"I can't go to ride anyway."

"Why not?"

"Well, I'm going away on a visit, and on Saturday I must be making my preparations."

"How long are you going to be away?"

"Several weeks or several months, maybe."

This was beginning to wind in the line. He knew these weeks or months would be a miserable suspense to him. He must brace up and know the worst before she went away. Suppose she should defer a definite answer till her return. The thought was terrible. Better have it over with one way or the other. He started in:

"You know we've been a great deal together. I've always had a great deal of respect for—"

"Are you going to the Carters' on Wednesday evening?"

He had made up his mind and was not to be thrown off the track even by so irrelevant a remark. He continued:

"I tell you what—I love you a whole lot, and I want you to be my wife."

Her head dropped on his shoulder in the most approved fashion. She said she had never dreamed of his loving her, and now that she knew it, she couldn't understand how he had concealed it from her. She must ask for a few days in which to— He begged pitifully, and she said "Yes."

There had been a good deal of skirting, which rendered the word all the sweeter.

HIGH AND LOW CITIES.

And the Difference in Our Altitudes East and West.

The differences between the eastern and western elevations in this country are curiously striking. Colorado has forty peaks that are more than 14,000 feet above sea level. Mount Washington, in New Hampshire, and Mount Mitchell, in North Carolina, the highest peaks in the Appalachian system north and south respectively, are considerably less than half as high as this above the ocean.

Several transcontinental railway lines in the west pull their main line trains over a greater elevation than that reached by the coast railroad up New Hampshire's above mentioned peak. These western elevations are, of course, reached gradually.

Most large cities lie low. Chicago is only about 600 feet above sea level and Pittsburgh but a hundred feet higher. Philadelphia ranges from sea level to a height in its suburbs of some 300 feet. Minneapolis, near the head of the Mississippi, has an elevation of less than 1,000 feet, and various parts of New Orleans, at the mouth of the great river, are recorded in the government tables as having elevations of from one foot to fifty feet. St. Louis lies about halfway between these terminal cities.

Montana is away up, with its leading city perched at the elevation of the highest peaks of the Adirondack mountains. In Denver there is a mark near the state capital which is just one mile above sea level.—New York Sun.

SLEEPING IN CHURCH.

Restful Pews From the Serious and Humorous Standpoints.

It is a matter of common experience that bright lights in a chamber, church or hall where numerous persons are gathered have the effect of producing drowsiness among certain members of the congregation or audience. This phenomenon is easily explained by the current knowledge of hypnosis. The drowsiness produced by the lights is a species of hypnosis. It has been suggested also that lack of proper ventilation causes a toxic quality in the atmosphere to which some people are especially susceptible, the result being an irresistible drowsiness.

Sleeping in church has always been a ready subject for humor. It is related that on one occasion when a proposal was under discussion to have a series of sermons preached on topics of the day which were agitating the public minds Rufus Choate, as a member of the congregation, protested vehemently, saying, "I seek my pew, as I seek my bed, for repose." There is also an anecdote of an old Scotchman who was asked if he knew a certain man in the same neighborhood. "Know him?" he replied, with emphasis. "Why, I've slept in the same Kirk w' him for forty year." But the majority of preachers have never been inclined to take a humorous view of the matter any more than Dean Swift.—Philadelphia Press.

Picking Pockets.

"Picking pockets," said the reformer to the thief, "must be a difficult and precarious business."

"It is," agreed the pickpocket. "It is until you get your hand in."

Unhappiness.

It is well for us that man can only endure a certain amount of unhappiness. What is beyond that either annihilates him or passes by him and leaves him unharmed.—Goethe
