The decision of Judge Calkins in the Bear creek bridge case, at Medford was given out Wednesday and is against the contentions urged by the attorneys for the county court and for the contractor's. The conclusion reached by the judge being that the county has not sufficient funds for the construction of the bridge at this time and should therefore be restrained from doidg so. As the full text of the decision appears in several of the county papers and our space is pretty well taken up with other matter we refrain from further mention at this time.

BOOK OF CAMP COOKING

A New Extension of the O. A. C. to the People of the State is Interesting.

Corvallis, Ore., July 30.—"Camp Cookery" is the title of the latest bulletin from the press of the Oregon Agricultural College. It is a small, conveniently sized book for carrying in the pocket of a hunting coat for ready reference and contains in its 31 pages a large amount of practical and useful information for those who spread their table under the greenwood bough. It was prepared by the school of domestic science and art for the special use of forest rangers, campers, mining prospectors, and sportsmen. It follows somewhat the lines of instruction in the course in camp cookery given at the college during the year for the forestry, mining and surveying students.

Believing that they could relieve some of the "blue days" in camp consequently upon "sad" biscuits, half-cooked "spuds" and monotonously greasy fried things, the domestic science teachers obtained from the forestry department of the college and the Forest Service a ration list and camp equipment selected by men of many years' field experience, and prepared a list of 65 carefully selected recipes. These are so simply explained that it takes no initial ordinary skill to use them. They are also conveiently indexed at the back of the book.

The ration list, sufficient for one man for 100 days, or 100 men for one day as giveg in the book, may be used as a brsis for making up supplies for camping parties. It includes the following: 100 lbs. fresh meat, 15 lbs. lard; 80 lbs. flour, bread or crackers; 15 lbs. corn-meal, cereals, macaronia, sago, or corn-starch; 5 lbs. baking powder or yeast cakes; 40 lbs. sugar; 1 gal. molasses; 12 lbs. coffee; 2 lbs. tea, chocolate or cocoa; 2 cans condensed milk; 10 lbs. butter; 20 lbs. dried fruit; 20 lbs. rice or beans; 100 lbs. potatoes or other fresh vegetables 30 cans canned vegetables or fruit; 4 oz. spices; 4 oz, flavoring extracts; 8 oz. pepper or mustard; 3 qts. pickles; 1 qt. vinegari and 4 lbs. salt.

Eggs may be substituted for fresh meat at the rate of 8 egg to a pound of meat. Fresh and cured meats may be interchanged at the rate of 5 pounds of the fresh for two of cured. A substitution of fresh milk may also be made for condensed at the rate of 5 qts. of fresh to a can of the other. Likewise fresh fruit may take the place of the dried in the ratio of 5 lbs. of fresh to 1 of dried. A ration, as the word is commonly used, is the food estimated to be necessary for one man for one day. The amount in this list is designed to be sufficiently liberal and varied for all circumstances, and is the maxium which should not be exceeded.

On the basis of this list a party of six may be comfortably fed for 17 days. The cost will vary, necessarily, with the location, being from 45 to 55 cents a man for a day if near large markets and convenient to railways. Where pack horses must be used, or transportation is otherwise difficult the ommission of the heavier provisions, such as canned goods containing much water, and the substitution of more flour, beans and dried fruits is advised. Where fresh meat can not be obtained additional bacon and corned beef must be included. Where the campers pack their own food on their backs a still further cut must be made in the heavy things. Under favorable conditions plenty of flour, bacon, rice, beans, oat meal, corn-meal, tea, sugar, dried fruit and salt must be taken. As much soap and matches as seems necessary must also be carried.

The little cook also explains how to build camp fires, and what should be included in the camp equipment. Among the interesting recipes are those for "army bread," "emergency biscuits," "dough boys," "pulled fire bread" ranchman's bread, flap-jacks, "fried quoits," "mulligan," "hunter's pudding," and Johnnie cake.
