A Gift With a Thought in It.

There's one very simple way out of the Christmas shopping problem; don't shop, but sit quietly at home and subscribe for The Youth's Companion. The chances are, too, that no present you could buy for the young friend or the family you delight to honor could confer so much pleasure as this gift of The Youth's Companion for a whole round year—fifty-two weeks' issues, and the fifty-second as keenly anticipated and enjoyed as the very first.

There will be stories for readers of every age; sound advice as to athletics; suggestions for the girl as to college or making her own way in the world; good things for every member of the family—all for $2.00—less than fifty cents a week.

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free all the remaining issues of 1912, as well as The Companion Window Transparency and Calendar for 1913, in rich, translucent colors. It is to be hung in the window or over the lamp-shade. You, too, as giver of the present will receive a copy of it.

 Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Williston, Pa., who says: "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other for croup there is nothing that excels it. For sale by all dealers."

A MOONSHINE LEGISLATOR

By M. QUAD
 Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

"It was ten or twelve years ago when our member of the legislature turned again moonshine whisky.
 "That meant that somebody else must be elected in his place, and what did the pesky people around here do but cum to me and want me to stand. They cum to my cabin a dozen at a time, and they shook hands and called me an honest man and all that, and the mo' I hung back the mo' they wanted me to run. When they got me into a tight corner I says:
 "I can't skassy read, and I can't skassy write, and yo' all know that I can't get up before that legislature and speak ten words, and what good could I do down to Nashville?
 "They pertended to give in at that, but what did the critters do but put me up to be voted for when the time cum, and the first thing I knowed I was 'lected by 400 majority'. When I heard the news I told it to the old woman and said:
 "Waal, what am I gwine to do about it? I've either got to hunt fer a cave and hole myself up or go to Nashville."
 "Yo'll go to Nashville," she says.
 "And what'll yo' do?"
 "I'll go with yo'."
 "Waal, we started off one day and got aboard of the railroad kyars. I was a little narvous, and the old woman braced her feet and hung on with her hands, but we got along without any calamity. In about an hour, when she dared to open her eyes and draw her breath, she says to me:
 "Zeb, how many houses have yo' seen since we left home?"
 "More'n a hundred," says I.
 "And how many people?"
 "More'n a thousand."
 "Shoo! Then we must hev got clear around the world and back home ag'in!"
 "When we got down to Nashville that was so many people and so many houses and such a movin' around that I got the old woman behind me and prepared to fight to the death, but not a critter laid hands on us. Some of 'em laughed at my cowhide boots, and some of 'em grinned at the old woman's poke bonnet, but everything was good natured. We went to a tavern to git board, and when the old woman sees the carpets on the floors, the stuff cheers standin' around and the lookin' glasses as big as a tablecloth she turns pale and puts her arms around me and says:
 "Zeb, I kin see now why thar ar so many sinners in this world. If a critter kin hev all these things, he don't keer a pesky drat about gwine to heaven. I'm afeared we'll be bad 'nuff to get haws in a week."
 "At the end of three days the legislature opened, and I had to go up to the statehouse. Lordy, stranger, but I'd rather tackled three old b'ars at once! I had goose flesh as I struck that crowd, and the old woman wasn't around to encourage me. I went into the statehouse with the crowd, and I'd jst found a seat when a feller comes around and says:
 "Excuse me, but ain't that a rifle yo've got thar?"
 "She be," says I. "It's a rifle which has killed mo' b'ars and wildcats than yo' could count in an hour, and she's still ready for the next varmint."
 "But yo' can't bring no deadly weepin' yere," he goes on. "This ain't no jumpin' match nor hoss race, but the legislature of Tennessee."
 "I told him I knowed whar I was, but that I should keep tight hold of that rifle till I knowed I was out of the woods, and he goes away growlin' to himself. Mebbe it was half six then arter that when a feller stands up off a platform and looks at me and says:
 "Does the honorable member from Beaver Cove expect to find any b'ars on the floor of this house?"
 "I ain't sayin' as I do, I answers, 'but if thar is a flet over moonshine whisky I might want suttin' bettes than a club!"
 "Bimeby that same feller stood up ag'in and says, as slick as yo' please:
 "Mebbe the honorable member from Beaver Cove would like to be excused for half an hour while he takes his gun home!"
 "Do any critter yere want to pick a fuss with Zeb White?" says I as I stands up.
 "Everybody laughs and claps his hands, but no one comes nigh me, and I puts on my cap, shoulders my rifle and says as I walks out:
 "It's an onery crowd, and thar ain't a man among yo' who kin pull a rabbit out of a boiler log!"
 "I went straight to the tavern, and thar I found the old woman shiverin' and shakin' fur her life.
 "What's the matter?" says I.
 "They've put pillar cases trimmed with lace on our bed," says she, "and the gorgeusness of it will bring on heart disease! Zeb, fur the Lawd's sake, let's go back home!"
 "But I'm here to watch moonshine, says I.
 "Never mind moonshine nor nothin' else on the face of this earth, but let's be agittin'. This world ain't fur us, Zeb. We is like two lost children wanderin' through the woods and expectin' to be eat up any minute, and I'm so skeert and frustrated that I shan't live two days longer! Zeb, if yo' love me, come home!"
 "I'll do it," says I. And she get on her poke, packed our carpetbag, and we was out of the town of Nashville befo' sundown, never to go back."
