

Bible Saves Drunk $900.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 16.—His strong belief in the Bible, which he has held for 50 years, was materially strengthened in the case of John H. Traub. While five fellow travelers in the district south of Yesler Way were "rolled" for their wealth, ranging in amounts from $21 to $25, Traub slept in an alley through the night and well into the morning before aroused by a policeman's stick. He awoke to find his money intact. Nine hundred dollars of his $885.35 had been secreted in the Bible he carried in an outside coat pocket.

When the gang of "drunk rollers" came upon Traub in the alley off Washington street and observed the Bible protruding from his pocket they passed on without molesting him. The found other good pickings, however, as five victims of the "roller" crew appeared at police headquarters. Traub was the last to be picked up by the police.
