

Medford Rate Injunction Case.

Portland, Jan. 14.—Following arguments in the United States district court before Federal Circuit Judge Gilbert and Judges Bean and Wolverson of the United States district court, to make permanent the temporary injunction in the Medford rate case, an early decision is expected.

The verbal argument was short and outlined the points made at the hearing of the temporary injunction.

Attorney General Crawford submitted a brief in support of the state's contention that this initiative rate bill was constitutional and the attorneys for the railroad companies were given thirty days in which to file their briefs.
