

Expectations

By EDUARD K. DROANE

I esteem those boys who are obliged to fight their own way up in the world most fortunate and those brought up to wealth most unfortunate.

I came of a family of the middle class and from childhood was made to understand that I would have to fight my own way in the world. But I was given an education, which is considered and usually is essential to success. At sixteen I was about to accept a position in business when an uncle of mine suddenly made a fortune by a deal in the stock market. He had the good sense to invest his gains in good first mortgage bonds and never afterward risked a cent in speculation.

My uncle was a bachelor sixty years old, and my mother was his favorite sister. He had always shown a partiality for me and proposed to my mother that he should send me to college and make me his heir, for he claimed that he had no desire to marry and if he should marry at his time of life he would wish he had not married. I longed for a college education and for my part was glad to accept my uncle's proposition.

I spent four years at college, my expenses being paid by my uncle. Indeed, he gave me an allowance that enabled me to associate with such of my fellow students as were not obliged to earn their living or a part of it while getting their education.

When I was graduated with a fair standing in my class I was one of the all around prominent men of it. I began the study of a profession—at my uncle's expense—and had nearly finished it when I received a telegram that my uncle was very ill. I went to him at once and assumed the direction of his household. His illness was destined to be a protracted one, and, there being no one but myself to do anything for him, I assumed charge not only of his domestic but his other affairs.

I spent five years ministering to the old man, living in his house with him and devoting myself exclusively to him. I regretted that my professional studies had been broken into, but since I was heir to a fortune and had what money I needed I did not regret. True, my uncle was very irritable and often tried my patience, but the doctors assured me that he could live only a few years at most, and then, having means at my command, I could make up for lost time, for, be it understood, I was not content to live in idleness and especially desired a career.

My uncle lingered longer than had been expected, and toward the last I found the work of amusing him very trying. I suggested cards, and he was pleased with the idea. He had been a poker player in his time, and by playing with him for a small stake I got through many hours that would otherwise have been a burden. Nevertheless, playing penny ante with a broken down old man hour after hour was not to me a pleasing way of spending my time, and when my uncle proposed to raise the stake to 5 cents I acquiesced.

This was a mistake. He was a natural gambler, and it was a knowledge of this fact—a fear that he would lose what he had made in the stock market—that led him to quit "the street." Since then his passion for gambling had lain dormant. It was now excited anew. He kept raising the stake, and I did not dare to oppose him. When he got the value of a chip up to 25 cents I began to be troubled. However, I hoped that by refusing to win I might keep out of trouble, for I realized that to win any considerable amount from him would irritate him, and in his broken condition I feared he might break with me.

One afternoon when he was more fretful than usual I got out the cards and the chips. During the sitting there occurred one of those marvelous runs of luck by which players are enabled to break banks. A jack pot had been growing on the table for some time when I was dealt three queens and drew a fourth. I would have bet a small sum but since the cards must be shown I feared to irritate my uncle by appearing to favor him. At the showdown he had a full of aces, which gave me the pot.

From that time the devil seemed to be in the cards. Whenever I dealt I gave myself large hands and invariably gave my uncle hands but a little below mine. When I had a straight flush he would have a three lower cards. Terrified, I attempted to deal him a hand larger than mine. He caught me in the act.

For some time I had seen by his expression that he suspected I was intentionally dealing to myself large hands and to him hands but a little smaller to draw him on. When he caught me trying to deal him a winner he fell back on the pillows behind him and pointed to the door. In vain I endeavored to explain. He continued to point to the door, and I left hoping when he had cooled to renew my efforts to disabuse his mind of his impression. He sent word for me to leave the house and never enter it again.

The next day he changed his will, leaving his fortune to charities, and a further result of the episode was his death a few days later.

I am over thirty years old, have never earned a cent in my life and don't know how to begin to do so. This comes of waiting for dead men's shoes.

Avalanche Kills Five.

Tye, Wash., Feb. 3.—Although the Great Northern tracks through here which were carried away with the big snow slide that occurred two weeks ago are again open, somewhere buried beneath the thousands of tons of ice and rock are the bodies of five laborers who were crushed by the slide. Three shifts labored day and night to open the lines of the railway, but the bodies of these five will remain forever under the avalanche, because it would cost thousands of dollars to recover them. Some skeletons may be found in the spring when the snow thaws away from the logs and boulders.

Oregon Sidelights.

Estacada Progress: Frank Ewing's Airedale dog killed the biggest bobcat that has been seen around Three Links in years. The cat was turned loose from a trap into the meadow and the dog dispatched it.

Union meetings will be held in the Methodist Episcopal church at Hood River commencing February 9, and continuing indefinitely, three churches united—the Christian, Methodist and United Brethren.

Baker Herald: The Baker Herald's suggestion of a planting day for sweet peas has been accepted by those promoting the sweet pea carnival for next summer. They have gone further with the idea and plan to have a planting week, with appropriate exercises.

Hillsboro Argus: Still the talk that we will have another hotel building, this time on Second street, continues. As a matter of fact, when the city has a session of court there are many times that transients have to go to Portland to get accommodations of this kind, all rooms being taken.

Astorian: The meteorological experts who are so fond of predicting climatic changes in this country are respectfully referred to this good, old-time, soaking Oregon winter. The change may be in progress, but it is barely perceptible to the most sanguine of the lesser prophets.

Burns News: Two large 650 page volumes of "The Missions and Missionaries of California" have been presented to the Burns library by Rev. Father Pius Nierman, local Catholic pastor, and the third volume, which is now in course of preparation, will be added when issued.

Amity Standard: The proposition of a cannery in Amity is getting a little nearer each week. Our people are at last awakening to the necessity of such a thing. For so long a time we have been depending on grain that it is hard for us to come to realize that we are passing out of that stage and getting to be fruit raisers.—Journal.
