FOREIGN AMBASSADORS.

Alove the Law of the Land to Which They Are Accredited.

In every willized country the person of a foreign ambassador is held to be inviolable, the law of the land being powerless to touch him for any offense. Immunity from arrest extends also to an ambassador's servants and the members of his suit.

There is, however, one case of record in which an ambassador's assistant was really executed, and that was in Great Britain. This was in 1653, and the victim was Pantaleon Ss, who was the brother and one of the train of the Portuguese ambassador. He quarreled with an acquaintance over a business matter and wounded him, the life of the party attacked being saved only by intervention of bystanders. But the next night Pantaleon Sa, with fifty of his Portuguese friends, all armed to the teeth, sought out his enemy with the intention of killing him. There was a desperate struggle, and one person was killed and several were wounded. The guards were called in, but the Portuguese fired on them also. Then Pantaleon Sa sought refuge in his embassy, where he thought he was safe, but the ambassador surrendered him, and he was duly executed after some hesitation on the part of the authorities.

The most extraordinary example of ambassadorial privilege on record occurred in 1661, when the French and Spanish ambassadors at London and their retinues fought a fierce battle in the streets of that capital. twelve persons being killed and for-ty wounded. On this occasion a new Swedish ambassador was coming to London, and there was a dispute between the French and Spanish ambassadors as to who should have precedence in the procession of welcome. When at last the Swedish diplomatists arrived and was proceeding from Tower hill to Whitehall, the Spaniards, who had a force of a hundred men on foot and fifty on horseback, formed across the road to bar the passage of the French. The latter fired a volley and charged the Spanish, sword in hand. Three horses, the postilion and the coachman of the French ambassador were killed at the outset, but the struggle lasted for a long time after that. In the end victory was with the Spanish. Nabody was punished. Nor could anybody be punished if such an event should happen anywhere today.-Harper's Weekly.

Friction matches are a comparatively modern invention. The first really practical friction match was made in the United States in 1836 Imitation Diamonds of Paste Are the by L. C. Before this time a clumsy form of match was imported from France. which had to be dipped into a bot- able dealer, masmuch as rock crystal the of sulphuric acid before it could be lighted. This took a great deal patent them, however, and on finally applying for letters patent found that a man named Alonzo Phillips, who was a peddler, had discovered through a third person the secret of making the matches and had already obtained a patent.

Treated Her to a Speech,

I remember Winston Churchill as a young fellow, very much in society when he wished to be and as any cousin of a duke could be, but an enfant terrible to many a hostess, leaving his manners at home when he went out to dise and apparently some place else when guests came to his mother's house. Shortly after his return from South Africa he offered to show me his interesting souvenirs of the Boer war. But when we were en tete-a-tete he became so absorbed in discussing the question of the Boer government that I found myself, to my amazement, listening to an oration of three-quarters of an hour. He turned his back upon me, striding over to a long mirror to deliver to his own reflection there. with numerous gestures and facial contortions, wheeling around at the finish to say, "It just occurred to me what a capital speech that would make in the house of commons some day." His Real Motive.

General F. D. Grant at a Washington's birthday dinner in New York some years ago told a story about a young Boston Tory.

"This Tory." he said. "fought during the Revolution neither on one side nor on the other. He took a pleasure trip on the continent, and he didn't come back home again until the war was over. He was treated very coldly by society on his return, and this grieved his good old mother to the heart. The dear old lady tried to explain the mat ter one afternoon to a Boston belle. " 'Naturally, as the head of the family.' she said. 'my son could not take part in the war. To him fell the duty, perhaps the more arduous duty, of protecting his mother and sisters and looking after the interests of the estate.' "'Oh, madam,' said the belle, with an icy smile, 'you need not explain. I assure you I'd have done exactly as your son did-I'm such a coward!"

Thrifty Papa and His Son,

A young Scotch friend of mine of high literary reputation generally spends once a year a month with his family on the outskirts of Edinburgh. His father is a minister occupying a very enviable position. On the day of his finds on the breakfast table by the side crowding around." of his plate a little paper carefully folded. It is a detailed account of the meals he has had during his visit to his father's house-in other words, his bill. But the son is as thrifty as papa and does not part with his coin before he has ascertained that all the items are accurate and the addition correct. "Why, father," said he, "I see you have marked the bacon and eggs for my yesterday's breakfast. I assure you I did not touch the eggs."

"You were wrong not to do so, then, my boy. They were on the table. Why didn't you help yourself?"-Paul Blouet (Max O'Rell).

Rossetti's Elephant.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the poet ps ater, once told Browning that if he gave him anything for Christmas it should be a young elephant. "But what on earth," said Browning, "will you do with an elephant if the stone. I give him to you?"

"I will teach him to clean the windows," Rossetti answered, "Then when some one passes the house he will see the elephant cleaning the windows and will say, 'Who lives in that house?' And people will tell hirs, 'Oh, that's the painter called Rossetti.' And he will say, 'I think I should like to buy one of that man's pictures.' So he will ring to come in, and I shall sell him a picture."
